BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HENRY VAUGHAN,
SILURIST.

Biographical Sketch of Henry Vaughan.

THe principal collections of the British poets were made at a time when the taste for French correctness was in the ascendant among us. This may in some measure account for the fact that so many smooth Rhymsters, such as Pomfret, Yalden, Lansdown, &c, have been placed on that august list, while Lord Brooke, the Fletchers, Withers, Herrick, Habington, and Quarles, have been excluded from it; and it is only when some happy accident brings these writers and their productions under our notice, that we discover how many of the true poets of England have been pushed from their places, to make room for mere pretenders to the title. In some instances it would almost seem as if these writers had been studiously run down by those, who stole from them first, and then sought to consign them to obscurity, in order to cover their own plagiarisms. From the days of Milton however, down to those of Burns and Cowper, a very low standard of poetic excellence prevailed in this country, and a trifling offence against good taste, a slight ruggedness in style and composition, were sufficient to condemn a poet of no mean order to oblivion; as if any correctness of taste or smoothness of versification could atone for the actual dearth of originality. Among those who have experienced in a remarkable degree this unfair treatment is the Poet, a part of whose works we propose now to republish. He is entirely unnoticed in the great collections of Bell, Anderson, and Chalmers; and even Campbell, in his specimens of the British poets, speaks in the most slighting manner of his talents and productions. All this however is trifling in comparison with the treatment he receives at the hand of his own County

Historian, Jones. This writer actually doubts whether Henry Vaughan ever produced any poetry whatever. He tells us that two little pieces of his, the Olor Ifcanus, and the Charnel House, were published by Thomas Vaughan, in the name of his brother Henry; but that they were generally believed to be Thomas Vaughan's own compositions. So ignorantly and flippantly could the Historian of Brecknockshire write respecting one of its greatest literary ornaments, whose works, now before us, amount to seven printed volumes. How far this depreciation was deserved, the poems preserved in the following pages will best testify; but we are much deceived if many of them do not commend themselves to all readers of true poetic taste, as among the most striking compositions of their age. In this case a desire will naturally arise to know something respecting the Author, and this curiosity the Editor here endeavours to gratify: and after carefully looking through the afore-said volumes, and making what enquiries he could both at Oxford and in the neighbourhood where Vaughan lived and died, he offers in the following biographical sketch the results of his researches. It may be as well here further to observe that Henry Vaughan the poet, must not be confounded with another of the same name, college, and neighbourhood, who wrote two little theological pieces of some merit. Though possessing so many features in common they were, as the records of Jesus College show, totally different persons.

Henry Vaughan, styled by his contemporaries "the Silurist," from his having been born among the Silures, or people of South Wales, was descended from one of the most ancient and respectable families of the Principality, deducing its pedigree from the ancient kings of that country. Two of his ancestors, Sir Roger Vaughan and Sir David Gam, lost their lives at the battle of Agincourt. His great grandmother was Lady Frances Somerset, daughter of Thomas Somerset, third son of Henry Earl of Worcester, and the possessions of the Vaughan family were very extensive both in Brecknockshire and in other parts of Wales. The chief family residence was the castle of Tretower, in the parish of Cwmdû, and, when it was dismantled, Skethrock, or Scethrog, in the same neighbourhood. At this latter place Shakespeare is said to have paid a visit to one of the family, and his Commentator Malone thinks that it was perhaps there that he picked up the word "Puck," respecting the origin of which some of his critics have been much puzzled. Pooky in Welsh signifies a goblin, and near Scethrog exists a valley, Cwm-Pooky, the goblin's vale, which belonged to the Vaughans, and which a tradition, still extant, states to have been a favorite resort of some distinguished "Bard," who had once visited that neighbourhood. The grandfather of the poet appears to have migrated from Tretower to Newton, in the parish of Llanfaintfread, about five miles distant from the family residence; and there his son Henry, in the year 1621, had issue Henry and Thomas Vaughan, twin brothers, the former of them the subject of the present memoir. Newton, once a comfortable mansion, is now a farm-house near the Usk, on the road leading from Crickhowel to Brecon, and distant about five miles from the latter place. Henry Vaughan styles it himself, in the date affixed to one of his dedications, "Newton by Ufke, near Sketh-rock." The situation is a very beautiful one, well calculated to nurse poetic thought and feeling; and there is abundant evidence in Vaughan's works, to show that it was not unappreciated by its poetic occupant. There are some very sweet Latin verses in one of his early volumes addressed to the Ufk, and the following lines occur in one of his English apostrophies to the same River;

"Garlands and songs and roundelayes,
Mild dewie nights, and sunshine dayes,
The turtle's voyce, joy without fear,
Dwell on thy bosome all the year!
To Thee the wind from far shall bring
The odours of the scattered spring,
And loaden with the rich arreare
Spend it in spicie whispers here."

At the age of eleven years Henry Vaughan and his brother were sent for education to the Rev. Matthew Herbert, Rector of Llangattock, under whose tuition they continued during the ensuing six years. Here they seem to have made considerable progress in classical literature, and to have imbibed a strong affection for their tutor, as well as a lively sense of their obligations toward him. They have both left behind them elegant and affectionate tributes in Latin Elegiacs to their old preceptor, and the graceful classicality of these compositions proves how well their praises were deserved.

From Llangattock the brothers in due time moved on to Oxford, and entered at Jesus College in the year 1638. They were then between 17 and 18 years of age, and well qualified for engaging in the studies of the University. They had fallen however on times unpropitious to literary pursuits. The great rebellion was now fermenting, and politics seemed to push every thing else into the back ground. The King too by and by moved his Court from London to Oxford, where he had the sympathy and support of almost all the members of the University. It was scarcely to be expected that two young and ardent spirits, like those of the Vaughans, would be indifferent to the Royal cause. They were sprung from a family distinguished for its loyalty; and Wales throughout the Civil War was always favorable to Charles: accordingly we find them both zealous royalists. Thomas Vaughan actually bore arms on the King's side, and Henry suffered obloquy and imprisonment for his known and avowed attachment to his Royal master. This latter fact appears from a poem of his addressed to his "learned friend, and loyal fellow prisoner, Thomas Powell, D.D." Whether he ever actually took the field on the King's side may be a matter of doubt. He speaks in a poem of his, of having been "torn from the side" of a dear young friend, R. W., in the battle of Rowton Heath, near Chester, 1645; and there are other passages in his works which seem to intimate that he had been engaged in actual conflict with the enemy. However, on the other hand a Latin poem of his, written in 1647, expressly asserts that he had then nothing to do with open warfare. He considered, he tells us, that there was a voice in a brother's blood, which would cry to Heaven against the shedder of it, and therefore he conscientiously abstained from meeting in the field his infatuated Countrymen, though not from the advocacy of his Sovereign's cause by every means which he deemed legitimate. His brother Thomas however had none of these scruples; and as his History is rather a singular one, it may as well be here pursued to its close. Obtaining ordination from Bishop Mainwaring, he was presented by a distant relation to the living of Llanfaintfread, the place of his birth, and went to reside there, close to his brother Henry. The Parliamentary Ecclesiastical Commissioners soon afterwards commenced their inquisitorial visitations, and Thomas Vaughan was expelled by them from his living, on the usual charges of drunkenness, swearing, incontinency, and having borne arms for the King, the latter probably being, as in many other instances, his only real offence. On this event he retired to Oxford, and devoted the rest of his life to Chemistry, or rather Alchemy, under the auspices of Sir Robert Murray, Secretary of State for Scotland, himself a great admirer of these studies. While in his service Thomas Vaughan published several works in verse and prose under the title of Eugenius Philalethes. The names of some of these are very whimsical and amusing. There is first "Anima magica abscondita, or a discourse of the Universal Spirit of Nature, with the strange abstruse and miraculous ascent and descent.—London, 1650." "Anthroposophia Theomagica, or a discourse of the Nature of Man, and his state after death, grounded on his Creator's proto-chemistry.—London, 1650." "Magia Adamica, or the Antiquity of Magic, and the descent thereof from Adam downward, proved; together with a perfect and full discovery of the true Cœlum terræ, or the Magician's Heavenly Chaos, and first matter of all things.—London, 1650." The last that we shall mention is, "Euphrates, or the waters of the East, being a short discourse of that secret fountain, whose water flows from fire, and carries in it the beams of the sun and moon; Lond., 1653." In the year 1665, on the Plague breaking out in London, the Court of Charles II. removed to Oxford, and Thomas Vaughan and his Patron accompanied it. A few days afterwards however, he was taken ill, and, retiring to Albury, in the neighbourhood, he died there, Feb. 27th, 1665. Anthony Wood sums up his character by saying, "He was a great Chymist, a noted lover of the fire, an experimental Philosopher, a zealous brother of the Rosicrucian fraternity, an understander of some of the Oriental languages, and a tolerable good English and Latin Poet. He was neither Papist nor Sectary, but a true resolute Protestant, in the best sense of the Church of England." The two Brothers seem to have been always strongly attached to each other. Thomas had the highest admiration of his brother's poetical powers, and ushered in his early works with strong prefatorial commendations; and Henry pathetically laments his more eccentric brother's untimely death, in the verses entitled "Daphnis," printed at the end of this volume.

It was during this period of Henry Vaughan's life that his earliest verses were produced. He was intimate with most of the young literary men of the day, and his occasional effusions appear to have been highly prized and long remembered among them. He speaks with much delight of his occasional visits to London at this time, and of the social evenings spent there at the Globe Tavern. He mentions Randolph as one whom he specially delighted in. He flung his poetic tribute, along with so many others, on Cartwright's premature hearse. Fletcher's plays, published in 1647, came out with commendatory verses of his prefixed to them. And Ben Jonson, "great Ben," seems to have been an object of his peculiar admiration. At this period also his own first publication was given to the world, a little volume of verses, chiefly amatory, addressed to Amoret, in the light easy style of the day, and closing with a translation—not a close one—of the 10th satire of Juvenal. Some of these poems exhibit a good deal of vigour and freedom in their versification. The following is a favourable specimen :

“ But grant some richer planet at my birth
Had spied me out, and measured so much earth
Or gold unto my share, I should have been Slave to these lower Elements, and seen
My high-born soul flagge with their drosse, and lye
A prisoner to base mud and Alchemie.
I should perhaps eate orphans, and sucke up
A dozen distrest widowes in one cup. * * *

Thanks then for this deliverance, Blessed Powers !
You that dispense man's fortune and his houres !
How am I to you all engaged ! that thus
By such strange meanes, almost miraculous,
You should preserve me ! you have gone the way
To make me rich by taking all away.
For I, had I been rich, as sure as fate,
Would have been meddling with the king or state,
Or something to undoe me ; and 'tis fit,
We know, that who hath wealth should have no wit.
But above all thanks to that Providence,
That armed me with a gallant soule and sense
'Gainst all misfortunes, that hath breathed so much
Of Heaven into me, that I scorn the touch
Of these low things, and can with courage dare
Whatever fate or malice can prepare.
I envy no man's purse or mines. I know
That losing them I've lost their curses too.”

The little volume from whence these lines are taken is entitled, “ Poems, with the tenth Satyre of Juvenal Englished, by Henry Vaughan, Gent. London, 1646.

It became however now necessary that Henry Vaughan should turn his attention to some profession for a livelihood. Whatever patrimony may have descended to him by inheritance, it appears to have been inadequate to his support. Besides, he was a Poet, one of that race of whom he playfully says himself, “Thou shalt not find a rich one. Take each clime,

And run o’er all the pilgrimage of time,
Thou’lt meet them poor, and everywhere describe
A threadbare, gold-less genealogie.”

That this lot was not indeed a very distressing one to him, we may conjecture from a passage already quoted, as well as from other fine lines of his, in which, addressing Fortune, he says,

“I care not for your wondrous hat and purse!
The world’s my palace. I’ll contemplate there;
And make my progress into every sphere.
The chambers of the air are mine, those three
Well furnished stories my possession be.
I hold them all in Capite, and stand
Propt by my Fancy there. I scorn your land,
It lies so far below me. Here I see
How all the sacred stars do circle me.”

Then, after casting off all the grosser parts of nature, he proceeds,

“Get up, my disentangled soul! thy fire
Is now refined, and nothing left to tire
Or clog thy wings. Now my auspicious flight
Hath brought me to the Empyrean light.
I am a separate essence, and can see
The emanations of the Deitie.
And how they pass the seraphims, and run
Through every throne and Domination.
With angels now and spirits do I dwell;
And here it is my nature to do well.
And shall I then forsake the stars and signs,
To dote upon thy dark and cursed mines?”

All this however, though fine in the way of poetic speculation, would not do for every day practice. Accordingly Henry Vaughan, having no taste for the Church, (indeed there was not much to attract him thither in such times) turned his attention to medical pursuits, and leaving Oxford without graduating there he went to London, and in due time became M. D., and retired to practice at Brecknock (now Brecon) the county Town, a few miles distant from his native place. He found things greatly changed there under the republican regime, and not very congenial, it would seem, to his own feelings.

“ Here’s brotherly Ruffs and Beards, and a strange fight

Of high monumental Hats, tane at the fight
Of eighty eight ; while every Burgesse foots
The mortal Pavement in eternall boots.”

We find him accordingly soon migrating from thence to his native residence, Newton, where he continued to pursue his profession, and to employ his leisure hours in various literary occupations.

About this time it was that he prepared for the press his little volume entitled “Olor Ifcanus,” the swan of the Ufk, the dedication of which to the Lord Kil-dare Digby, bears date December 17, 1647. This volume however he never himself published. It appears to have been consigned to the hands of his brother, when he returned to Oxford on his ejection from the living of Llanfaintfread, and in 1651, three years afterwards, it was printed by him, with an apologetic advertisement, and commendatory verses from himself and other Oxford friends. Thomas Vaughan, in his address to the Reader, expressly says, “I have not the Author’s approbation to the fact,” (viz, of publication) “but I have the Law on my side,” (as) “I hold it no man’s prerogative to fire his own house.” It would appear therefore that Henry Vaughan wished to have destroyed these ebullitions of his youthful muse, as he had many others of the same kind, and that they were in the end published contrary to his desire. Yet there is really nothing objectionable in the volume. The poems contained in it are not of a strictly religious character; yet they are full of just and noble sentiments; and I am not aware of a line that any one need have been ashamed of. The volume, when complete, has a curious frontispiece, engraved by Robert Vaughan (qu. a relation?) with the Swan of the Uſk, very conspicuous in the centre of it, and some Latin verses, “ad Posteror,” before it, giving in enigmatical language, a slight sketch of the Author’s life and opinions. The matter consists of original poems, many of them addressed to persons of the Author’s acquaintance, together with translations from Ovid’s Tristia, Boethius, and Casimir, and a brief specimen or two will suffice to show, that they are not without their beauties.

In an Epithalamium occur these lines,

“ Fresh as the houres may all your pleasures be,
 And healthfull as Eternitie !
 Sweet as the flowre’s first breath, and close
 As th’ unseen spreadings of the Rose,
 When he unfolds his curtained head,
 And makes his bosome the Sun’s bed !

Of the Lady Elizabeth, daughter of James I., he says,

“ Thou seem’st a rose-bud born in snow,
 A flowre of purpose sprung to bow
 To heedless tempests, and the rage
 Of an incensèd stormie age.
 And yet as Balm-trees gently spend
 Their tears for those that doe them rend,
 Thou didst not murmur nor revile,
 But drank’st thy wormwood with a smile.”

In a different strain he thus concludes an invitation to a friend to Brecknock.

“ Come then ! and while the flow isicle hangs
 At the stiffe thatch, and Winter’s frostie pangs
 Benumme the year, blithe as of old let us
 Mid’ noise and war, of peace and mirth discusse.
 This portion thou wert born for. Why should we Vex at the time’s ridiculous miserie ?
 An age that thus hath fooled itself, and will,
 Spite of thy teeth and mine, persist so still.

Let's fit then at this fire ; and, while wee steal
 A revell in the Town, let others feal,
 Purchase, and cheat, and who can let them pay,
 Till those black deeds bring on the darksome day.
 Innocent spenders wee ! a better use
 Shall wear out our short lease, and leave the obtuse
 Rout to their husks. They and their bags at best
 Have cares in earnest. Wee care for a jest !”

Another poem, the Christian Politician,
 thus ends :

“ Come then, rare politicians of the time,
 Brains of some standing, Elders in our clime,
 See here the method. A wise solid state
 Is quick in acting, friendly in debate,
 Joynt in advice, in resolutions just,
 Mild in successe, true to the Common trust.
 It cements ruptures, and by gentle hand
 Allayes the heat and burnings of a land.
 Religion guides it ; and in all the tract
 Designs so swift, that Heaven confirms the act.
 If from these lists you wander, as you steere,
 Look back, and catechise your actions here.
 These are the marks to which true statesmen tend,
 And greatness here with goodness hath one end.”

We can only afford room for one specimen of the translations.

BOETHIUS, METRUM 4.

“ Whose calme soule in a settled state
 Kicks under foot the frowns of fate,

And in his fortunes bad or good
Keep the same temper in his blood,
Not him the flaming clouds above,
Nor Ætna's fierce tempests, move.
No fretting seas from shore to shore,
Boiling with indignation o'er,
Nor burning thunderbolt, that can
A mountain shake, can stirre this man !”

At the close of this volume are inserted four prose translations, all of them bearing more or less on the Author's pursuits or circumstances. The first, “on the benefit we may get by our enemies,” from Plutarch ; the second, “Of the Diseases of the Mind and Bodie,” from the same ; another, on the same subject, from Maximus Tyrius ; and lastly, “the praise and happiness of the Country Life,” from the Spanish of Guevara. All these have separate title-pages, and were published in the year 1651.

We now however approach a very important period of our Poet's life, when a change seems to have come over his spirit, which influenced it to the close of his earthly career. He was at this time visited by a severe and lingering illness, of what character exactly is not specified. It was however of a nature to bring him to the brink of the grave, and to keep him long in a state of solitude and suffering; and while he was in this condition more deep and solemn religious views and feelings appear to have broken in upon his soul than any he had before harboured. The high and holy claims of God, the infinite importance of eternity, the worthlessness of the world and the folly of living for it, the baseness of sin and the consequences of indulging in it, all seem to have pressed heavily on his mind at this crisis, and to have filled him with great humility and seriousness; and though he subsequently learned to look with hope and comfort to the mercy of God, vouchsafed to the penitent, through the death and merits of Christ Jesus, still this spirit of lowly watchfulness, so suitable to frail humanity, seems never to have left him. He carried it with him to his dying bed; and it appears in the Epitaph he wished to be inscribed on his tomb. During this period likewise, he seems to have had his affections severely tried by the untimely death of friends. There are in the pieces composed by him at this season many touching, though obscure allusions to such losses. And these, along with his other trials, contributed to break up the fallow ground in his heart, and prepare it for the reception of the divine seed that was subsequently sown there. Just at this time he became acquainted with the writings of George Herbert, and derived from them so much of comfort and instruction, that he determined to make the life and compositions of that holy man his own future models. In imitation therefore of his Temple, he composed, during the intervals of exemption from acute suffering, a number of little "Sacred Poems, and private Ejaculations;" and while his Oxford friends were publishing, contrary to his wishes, the Olor Iscanus, he gave the world a more faithful record of his mind and heart, in a collection of these, entitled, "Silex Scintillans," (Sparks from the flintstone.) This work was printed in London in the year 1650, and consisted of only one of the two parts subsequently published together.

Close upon this publication followed a little book of devotions in prose, entitled, "The Mount of Olives," and printed in the year 1652. It consists entirely of prayers, meditations, and admonitions, all excellent of their kind, and calculated at once to benefit the reader, and raise the writer in his estimation. There is little or no poetry in the volume, the only original poetical production there being a kind of preface to the last piece in the volume, "an excellent discourse of the blessed state of man in glory, written by the most reverend and holy Father Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury." The lines are as follows,

Here Holy Anselme lives in every page,
 And sits archbishop still to vex the age.
 Had he foreseen, (and who knows but he did?)—
 This fatal wrack, which deepe in time lay hid,
 'Tis but just to believe, that little hand,
 Which clouded him, but now benights our land,
 Had never like Elias driven him hence,
 A sad retirer for a slight offence.
 For were he now, like the returning year,
 Restored to view these desolations here,
 He would do penance for his old complaint,
 And weeping say, that Rufus was a Saint.

This work is dedicated, October 1st,

1651, to Sir Charles Egerton Knight, to whom the writer says, "I know, Sir, you will be pleased to accept this poore olive leafe presented to you, so that I shall not be driven to put forth my hand to take in my Dove again." It will be conjectured, from the Epithets given to St. Anselm, that Vaughan's religious spirit, though very fervent and real, was not exactly of the character of that which prevailed at this time. The Puritan principle had been to cry down antiquity, and pour contempt on that which was authorized and established. Vaughan on the other hand was a lover of order. He knew how to distinguish between forms and formality. He delighted to look up to the great and good of other days for direction and precedent. What others before him had found to be conducive to their spiritual welfare, might, he thought, conduce to his. He was glad therefore to listen to their teaching, and conform to their example; and instruction always came to him with additional weight and force, when backed by such authority.

At no very distant period Vaughan sent forth another little volume in prose, entitled, "Flores Solitudinis," (Flowers of Solitude) "certaine pieces collected by him in his sicknesse and retirement." There are, first, two discourses, the one "of Temperance and Patience," and the other "of Life and Death," translated, in 1652, from the Latin of Nierembergius; secondly, "the World Contemned," taken from Eucherius, Bishop of Lyons; and thirdly, "the Life of Paulinus, Bishop of Nola," compiled by Vaughan himself. These are dedicated to the same Sir Charles Egerton, to whom his Mount of Olives was inscribed, and his address to him concludes in these words; "You will " look upon my suddaine and small pre" sents as upon some forward flowers,

 " whose kinde haste hath brought them
 " above ground in cold weather. The " uncertainty of life, and a peevish incon-
 " stant state of health, would not suffer
 " me to stay for greater performances, or
 " a better season, lest, losing this, I should " never again have the opportunity to " manifest, how much and how sincerely
 " I am, Sir, your Servant &c." These pieces, Vaughan tells us, were likewise translated by him during his long illness. They had comforted and instructed him under his heavy afflictions, and he published them in the hope that they might produce like effects on others, and enable them likewise to give up the world for God. "To leave the world," he says in his preface, "when it leaves us, is both fordid and sorrowful: I honour that temper which can lay by the garland when he might keep it on; which can pass by a rosebud, and bid it grow, when he is invited to crop it." It is a remarkable circumstance that some of the most sweet and simple prose writers in our language are to be found among those, whose compositions in verse are the most full of affectations and conceits. What a dissimilarity for instance is there between Cowley's "Essays" and his "Mistress," between Donne's "Sermons" and his "Poems"! Quarles's grotesque quaintness in his "Emblems" curiously contrasts with the simple strength of his "Judgment and Mercy"; and we find little of the Epigrammatic abruptness of the "Night

Thoughts" in Young's "Centaur not fabulous." And if Vaughan had attempted any great original work in prose, it seems highly probable, from the brief specimens which we have of his capabilities, that he would have excelled in this species of composition likewise. The subjects however, on which he employed his pen, appear to have had no interest for the public at this period. Indeed, translations from the Fathers were not likely at such a time to meet with many sympathizing readers. The world had been deluged by the Puritans with their weak and washy publications. Still their crude theology was that generally in vogue. Those, who had been disposed to go up and drink at the stream a little nearer to its source, had passed away with the exiled Cofins and Bramhalls of a former generation. The Court party was soon to come back from France vitiated alike in taste and principles, and ready to make a jest of every thing religious. This then, was not a time at which treatises, such as those now published by Henry Vaughan, were likely to become popular. They were accordingly never reprinted, and their very existence is almost unknown to ordinary English Readers. The following verses close this little volume, of which the last thirty-four lines are very striking.

ST. PAULINUS, TO HIS WIFE, THERASIA.

“ Come, my true Confort in my joyes and care,
 Let this uncertaine and still waſting ſhare
 Of our fraile life be given to God ! you ſee,
 How the ſwift dayes drive hence inceſſantlie ;
 And the fraile drooping world, though ſtill thought gay,
 In ſecret ſlow conſumption weares away.
 All that we have paſſe from us, and once paſt,
 Returne no more. Like clouds they ſeeme to laſt,
 And ſo delude looſe greedy mindes. But where
 Are now thoſe trim deceits ? To what dark ſphere
 Are all thoſe falſe fires ſunk, which once ſo ſhined,
 They captivated ſoules and ruled mankind ?
 And what, Therafia, doth it us availe,
 That ſpacious ſtreames ſhall flow and never faile,
 That aged forreſts live to tyre the winds,
 And flowers each Spring returne and keepe their kinds ?
 Thoſe ſtill remaine ; but all our Fathers dyed ;
 And we ourſelves but for few dayes abide.

This ſhort tyme then was not given us in vaine,
 To whom tyme dyes, in which we dying gaine ;
 But that in tyme eternall life ſhould be
 Our care, and endleſſe reſt our induſtrie.
 And yet this taſke, which the rebellious deeme
 Too harſh, who God’s mild lawes for chaines eſteem,

Suites with the meeke and harmlesse heart so right,
That 'tis all ease, all comfort, and delight.

“ To love our God with all our strength and will ;

“ To covet nothing ; to devise no ill

“ Against our neighbours ; to procure or doe

“ Nothing to others which we would not to

“ Our very selves ; not to revenge our wrong ;

“ To be content with little ; not to long

“ For wealth and greatnesse ; to despise or jeare

“ No man ; and, if we be despised, to bear :

“ To feed the hungry ; to hold fast our crown ;

“ To take from others nought to give our owne.”

These are his precepts, and alas in these

What is so hard but faith may doe with ease ?

He that the holy Prophets doth beleeve,

And on God's words relies, (words that still live,

And cannot dye) that in his heart hath writ

His Saviour's death and triumph ; and doth yet

With constant care admitting no neglect

His second dreadfull coming still expect ;

To such a liver earthy things are dead ;

With Heaven alone, and Hopes of Heaven hee's fed.

He is no vassall unto worldly trash,

Nor that black knowledge, which pretends to wash,

But doth defile ; a knowledge by which men

With studied care lose Paradise again.

Commands and titles, the vaine world's device,

With gold, the forward seed of sin and vice,

He never minds. His ayme is farre more high ;

And stoopes to nothing lower than the skye.

Nor griefs nor pleasures breede him any pain :

He nothing feares to lose ; would nothing gaine.

Whatever hath not God he doth detest.
He lives to Christ ; is dead to all the rest.
This Holy One, sent hither from above,
A Virgin brought forth, shadowed by the Dove.
A crown of Thornes His blessed head did wound,
Nayles pierced His hands and feet, and He fast bound
Stuck to the painfull crosse, where, hanged till dead,
With a cold speare his heart's dear blood was shed.
All this for man, for bad ungratefull man,
The true God suffered : not that suffering can Adde to his glory aught, who can receive
Acceffe from nothing ; whom none can bereave
Of his all-fulnesse : but the blest designe
Of His sad death was to save me from mine.
He dying bore my sins ; and the third day
His early rising raised me from the clay.
To such great mercies what shall I preferre,
Or who from loving God shall mee deterre ?
Burne mee alive with curious skilfull paine,
Cut up and searh each warme and breathing vein ;
When all is done death brings a quick release,
And the poore mangled body sleepest in peace.
Hale mee to prisons ; shut mee up in brasse :
My still free soule from thence to God shall passe.
Banish or bind me ; I can be no where
A stranger or alone ; my God is there.
I fear not famine. . How can he be said
To Starve, who feedes upon the Living Bread ?
And yet this courage springs not from my store ;
Christ gave it mee, who can give much, much more.
I of myself can nothing dare or doe ;
He bids mee fight ; and makes mee Conquer too.

If like great Abraham I should have command
To leave my father's house and native land,
I would with joy to unknown regions run,
Bearing the banner of His blessed Son.
On worldly goods I will have no design;
But use my owne, as if mine were not mine.
Wealth I'll not wonder at, nor greatnesse seeke;
But chuse, though laughed at, to be poore and meake.
In woe and wealth I'll keepe the same stayed mind;
Grief shall not breake me, nor joyes make me blind!

Then come, my faithfull comfort, joyne with me
In this good fight, and my true helper be!
Cheer me when sad, advise me when I stray;
Let us be each the other's guide and stay.
Be your Lord's guardian. Give joynt ayde and due;
Helpe him when false; Rise when he helpeth you.
That so we may not onely one flesh bee,
But in one Spirit and one will agree!"

It would be gratifying to be able to state that Henry Vaughan's poetry, replete as it is with beauty and originality, had met with a better reception than his prose. But we cannot in honesty say that this was the case. That he had his admirers among the discerning few there can be no doubt. His friends at Oxford more especially seem to have treasured up carefully every scrap of verse that fell from his pen. But with the public at large, and particularly with reference to his religious poetry, it was far otherwise. It might at first sight appear that his Silex Scintillans had at least found readers enough to carry it through a second edition. A volume so designated by the Publisher was sent forth in the year 1655, containing all the poems printed in the year 1651, together with a second part, almost equal in extent to the former, and the whole preceded by a very interesting preface, full of just thoughts and pious sentiments. But on closer inspection it is evident that we have here only the unfold copies of the volume before published, with the preface and second part added to them, and a new title prefixed to the whole. All this is discernible from the paging of this nominally second edition, and it speaks loudly of the neglect which the previous volume had experienced. The poems contained in this second part are in no respect inferior to those before published. Indeed in some points they present rather an improvement on them. They seem to exhibit more of Vaughan's own natural vein, and less of that of his excellent master. Preerving all the piety of George Herbert, they have less of his quaint and fantastic turns, with a much larger infusion of poetic feeling and expression. Their merits however seem to have been but ill appreciated by the tasteless and godless generation for whom Vaughan wrote, and his little volume accordingly soon sank into oblivion. We learn from its contents that the Author was still a sufferer, his body still labouring under the protracted illness that had attacked him five years before, and his heart bleeding from the further loss of beloved relatives and friends.

It is scarcely to be wondered that, under such discouraging circumstances, Henry Vaughan, in the prime of life, and the full maturity of his talents, should have ceased from all further Authorship. Accordingly during the forty years that he lived, after the second edition of his Silex, he gave nothing more to the public. In the year 1678 however, one of his zealous Oxford friends, J. W. (the initials have not been verified) sent forth a little volume, entitled "Thalia Rediviva, the pastimes and diversions of a Countrey Muse," which, though it contains no reference to Henry Vaughan in the title page, consists entirely of his poetry, together with a few of his brother Thomas's Latin verses appended. But in this publication Henry Vaughan took no part, though there is no reason to suppose that he was actually opposed to it. The contents are of a motley description, consisting of elegies, translations, addresses to individuals, and are evidently of the most various dates, some of them written in his youthful days at the University, and others in his maturer years, subsequently in all probability to the publication of the Silex Scintillans. The Volume is ushered in by commendatory verses from "the matchless Orinda," Mrs. Catherine Philips, Dr. Thomas Powell, and other Oxford friends and admirers, and contains nothing which the most fastidious moralist could find fault with. At the close of the work is a collection of religious pieces, entitled "pious thoughts and ejaculations," the whole of which, together with a Pastoral Elegy on the death of Thomas Vaughan, we have included in the volume now published, so that the whole of Henry Vaughan's religious poetry may stand at once before the reader.

From the time of this last publication to that of his death we have no further information to furnish respecting our Author. He appears to have stolen away altogether from public life, to pursue his quiet walk with God, and enjoy the converse of such friends as were still left to him; and found abundant scope for the exercise of his powers, in the labours of a useful profession, and the education of his growing family. He was twice married, and had by his first wife five children, two sons and three daughters, and by the second one daughter. Of the latter alone is anything further known. She married John Turberville, and her granddaughter died single in 1780 aged 92. For himself he had the satisfaction of closing his days under the roof and amidst the scenes where they had commenced. His beloved Usk and the beautiful Vale through which it flows were daily before his eyes to the last, and probably afforded him many a poetic ramble, when his more serious avocations admitted of them. It would appear from one of his little Latin poems, that he was a fisherman, and the moral with which he accompanies a salmon of his own catching, sent as a present to a friend, would seem to imply that this amusement was occasionally pursued by him even in riper and more thoughtful years. But these little conjectural notices of his ordinary life and avocations must necessarily rest on very slender data. Much more satisfactory is it to know, that he died, as he lived, in holy consciousness of his own unworthiness, and in humble dependence on the merits of his Redeemer. He departed this life, April the 23rd, in the year 1695, aged 73, and desired that the following inscription should be placed on his tomb, “ Servus inutilis,

Peccator maximus,
Hic jaceo.
Gloria ! † miserere ! ”

‘ An unprofitable servant the chief of sinners I lie here. Glory be to God ! † Lord have mercy upon me ! ’

Such are the particulars that we have been able to gather respecting Henry Vaughan and his works. They present a picture of one who lived to God rather than to man ; and if there is little of incident in the details, let us remember, that it is with the lives of private individuals as with the reigns of Princes ; those are often the happiest and most prosperous, which make the least noise and show in the page of History. The mind and heart of our Author are abundantly exhibited in his writings, which are full of individuality ; and while we would deprecate pledging ourselves to every sentiment they contain, we feel that they claim for him unvarying respect, and commend themselves to us as the genuine overflowings of a sincere and humble spirit. We feel, while reading them, that we have to do with a truly good and earnest man. His poems display much originality of thought, and frequently likewise much felicity of expression. The former is indeed at times condensed into obscurity, and the latter defaced with quaintness. But Vaughan never degenerates into a smooth versifier of common places. One indeed of his great faults as a poet, is the attempt to crowd too much of matter into his sentences, so that they read roughly and inharmoniously, the words almost elbowing each other out of the lines. His rhymes too are frequently defective, and he delights in making the sense of one line run over into the line following. This, when not overdone, is doubtless a beauty in versification, and redeems it from that monotony, which so offends in the poets of Queen Anne's time. Yet even this may be pushed to excess, and become by its uniformity liable itself to the imputation of monotony. Take for instance the very beautiful lines of Vaughan entitled "Rules and Lessons," the first five stanzas of which strikingly exemplify the fault here specified; and it was perhaps their consequent harshness, that induced Bernard Barton to transpose them, not infelicitously, into a different stanza. A more favourable specimen of line flowing into line is the following morning address to a "Bird."

Hither thou com'st. The busie wind all night
 Blew through thy lodging; where thy own warm wing
 Thy pillow was: and many a fullen storm,
 For which coarse man seems much the fitter born,
 Rained on thy bed,
 And harmless head;

And now as fresh and cheerful as the light
Thy little heart in early hymns doth sing!

This will be felt to be very tender and beautiful, notwithstanding the imperfect rhyme in the fourth line; and the volume now republished is full of like passages. Indeed it may with truth be said of Vaughan that his faults are in a great measure those of the age he lived in, and the master he imitated, while his beauties are all his own. That he will ever become a thoroughly popular poet is scarcely to be expected in this age. But among those who can prize poetic thought, even when clad in a dress somewhat quaint and antiquated, who love to commune with a heart overflowing with religious ardour, and who do not value this the less, because it has been lighted at the earlier and purer fires of Christianity, and has caught a portion of their youthful glow, poems like these of Henry Vaughan's will not want their readers, nor will such readers be unthankful to have our Author and his Works introduced to their acquaintance.

Rome, April 1847.

The Author's Preface.

THat this Kingdom hath abounded with those ingenious persons, which in the late notion are termed Wits, is too well known. Many of them having cast away all their fair portion of time, in no better imployments, than a deliberate search, or excogitation of idle words, and a most vain, insatiable desire to be reputed Poets; leaving behinde them no other Monuments of those excellent abilities conferred upon them, but such as they may (with a Predecessor of theirs) term Parricides, and a foul killing Issue, for that is the Βραβεῖον, and Laureate Crown, which idle Poems will certainly bring to their unrelenting Authors.

And well it were for them, if those willingly studied and wilfully-published vanities could defile no spirits, but their own; but the case is far worse. These Vipers survive their Parents, and for many ages after (like Epidemic diseases) infect whole Generations, corrupting always and unhallowing the best-gifted Souls, and the most capable Vessels: for whose sanctification and well-fare, the glorious Son of God laid down his life, and suffered the precious blood of his blessed and innocent heart to be poured out. In the mean time it cannot be denied, but these men are had in remembrance, though we cannot say with any comfort, Their memorial is blessed; for, that I may speak no more than the truth (let their passionate worshippers say what they please) all the commendations that can be justly given them will amount to no more, than what Pudentius the Christian-sacred Poet bestowed upon Symmachus;

*Os dignum æterno tinctum quod fulgeat auro
Si mallet laudare deum : cui sordida monstra
Prætulit, & liquidam temeravit crimine vocem ;
Haud aliter, quàm cum rastris qui tentat eburnis
Cænorum versare solum, &c. —————*

In English thus,

A wit most worthy in tryed Gold to shine,
 Immortal Gold ! had he sung the divine
 Praise of his Maker : to whom he preferr'd
 Obscene, vile fancies, and prophanely marr'd
 A rich, rare stile with sinful, lewd contents ;
 No otherwise, then if with Instruments
 Of polish'd Ivory, some drudge should stir
 A dirty sink, &c.————

This comparison is nothing odious, and it is as true, as it is apposite ; for a good wit in a bad subject, is (as Solomon said of the fair and foolish woman) Like a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, Prov. 11. 22. Nay, the more acute the Author is, there is so much the more danger and death in the work. Where the Sun is busie upon a dung-hill, the issue is always some unclean vermine. Divers persons of eminent piety and learning (I meddle not with the seditious and Schismatical) have, long before my time, taken notice of this malady ; for the complaint against vitious verse, even by peaceful and obedient spirits, is of some antiquity in this Kingdom. And yet, as if the evil consequence attending this inveterate error were but a small thing, there is sprung very lately another prosperous device to assist it in the subversion of souls. Those that want the Genius of verse fall to translating; and the people are every term plentifully furnished with various Foreign vanities; so that the most lascivious compositions of France and Italy are here naturalized and made English: And this, as it is sadly observed, with so much favor and success, that nothing takes (as they rightly phrase it) like a Romance. And very frequently, if that Character be not an Ivybush the buyer receives this lewd ware from persons of honor: who want not reason to forbear, much private misfortune having sprung from no other seed at first, than some infectious and dissolving Legend.

To continue after years of discretion in this vanity, is an inexcusable desertion of pious sobriety: and to persist so to the end, is a wilful despising of Gods sacred exhortations, by a constant, sensual volutation or wallowing in impure thoughts and scurrilous conceits, which both defile their Authors, and as many more as they are communicated to. If every idle word shall be accounted for, and if no corrupt communication should proceed out of our mouths, how desperate, I beseech you, is their condition, who all their life time, and out of meer design, study lascivious fictions, then carefully record and publish them, that instead of grace and life, they may minister sin and death unto their readers? It was wisely considered, and piously said by one, That he would read no idle books; both in regard of love to his own soul, and pity unto his that made them; for, said he, if I be corrupted by them, their Composer is immediately a cause of my ill; and at the day of reckoning, though now dead, must give an account for it, because I am corrupted by his bad example, which he left behinde him. I will write none, lest I hurt them that come after me; I will read none, lest I augment his punishment that is gone before me. I will neither write, nor read, lest I prove a foe to my own soul: while I live, I sin too much; let me not continue longer in wickedness, than I do in life. It is a sentence of sacred authority, that he that is dead is freed from sin; because he cannot in that state, which is without the body, fin any more ; but he that writes idle books makes for himself another body, in which he always lives, and sins (after death) as fast and as foul, as ever he did in his life ; which very consideration deserves to be a sufficient Antidote against this evil disease.

And here, because I would prevent a just censure by my free confession, I must remember, that I my self have, for many years together, languished of this very sickness ; and it is no long time since I have recovered. But (blessed be God for it !) I have by his saving assistance suppressed my greatest follies, and those which escaped from me, are, I think, as innoxious, as most of that vein use to be ; besides, they are interlined with many virtuous, and some pious mixtures. What I speak of them is truth : but let no man mistake it for an extenuation of faults, as if I intended an Apology for them, or my self, who am conscious of so much guilt in both, as can never be expiated without special sorrows, and that cleansing and pretious effusion of my Almighty Redeemer. And if the world will be so charitable as to grant my request, I do here most humbly and earnestly beg that none would read them.

But an idle or sensual subject is not all the poyson in these Pamphlets. Certain Authors have been so irreverently bold, as to dash Scriptures, and the sacred Relations of God with their impious conceits ; And (which I cannot speak without grief of heart) some of those desperate adventurers may, I think, be reckoned amongst the principal or most learned Writers of English verse.

Others of a later date, being corrupted, it may be, by that evil Genius, which came in with the publique distractions, have stuffed their books with Oathes, horrid Execrations, and a most gross and studied filthiness. But the hurt that ensues by the publication of pieces so notoriously ill lies heavily upon the Stationer's account, who ought in conscience to refuse them, when they are put into his hands. No loss is so doleful as that gain, that will endamage the soul. He, that prints lewdness and impieties, is that mad-man in the Proverbs, who casteth firebrands, arrows and death.

The suppression of this pleasing and prevailing evil, lies not altogether in the power of the Magistrate; for it will flie abroad in Manuscripts, when it fails of entertainment at the press. The true remedy lies wholly in their bosoms, who are the gifted persons, by a wise exchange of vain and vitious subjects, for divine Themes and Celestial praise. The performance is easie, and, were it the most difficult in the world, the reward is so glorious, that it infinitely transcends it: for they that turn many to righteousness shall shine like the stars for ever and ever: whence follows this undeniable inference, that the corrupting of many, being a contrary work, the recompense must be so too; and then I know nothing reserved for them, but the blackness of darkness for ever; from which, O God, deliver all penitent and reformed spirits!

The first, that with any effectual success attempted a diversion of this foul and overflowing stream, was the blessed man, Mr. George Herbert, whose holy life and verse gained many pious Converts, of whom I am the least; and gave the first check to a most flourishing and admired

Wit of his time. After him followed diverse,—Sed non passibus æquis; they had more of fashion, than of force: And the reason of their so vast distance from him, besides differing spirits and qualifications, (for his measure was eminent,) I suspect to be, because they aimed more at verse, than perfection, as may be easily gathered by their frequent impressions, and numerous pages: Hence sprang those wide, those weak, and lean conceptions, which in the most inclinable Reader will scarce give any nourishment or help to devotion; for not flowing from a true, practick piety, it was impossible they should effect those things abroad, which they never had acquaintance with at home; being onely the productions of a common spirit, and the obvious ebullitions of that light humor, which takes the pen in hand, out of no other consideration, than to be seen in print. It is true indeed, that to give up our thoughts to pious Themes and Contemplations, if it be done for pietie's sake, is a great step towards perfection; because it will refine, and dispose to devotion and sanctity. And further, it will procure for us (so easily communicable is that loving Spirit) some small prelibation of those heavenly refreshments, which descend but seldom, and then very sparingly, upon men of an ordinary or indifferent holyness. But he that desires to excel in this kinde of Hagiography, or holy writing, must strive by all means for perfection and true holyness, that a door may be opened to him in heaven, Rev. 4. 1. and then he will be able to write, with Hierotheus and holy Herbert, “A true Hymn.”

To effect this in some measure, I have begged leave to communicate this my poor Talent to the Church, under the protection and conduct of her glorious Head: who, if he will vouchsafe to own it, and go along with it, can make it as useful now in the publick as it hath been to me in private. In the perusal of it, you will (peradventure) observe some passages, whose history or reason may seem something remote; but were they brought nearer, and plainly exposed to your view, though that perhaps might quiet your curiosity, yet would it not conduce much to your greater advantage. And therefore I must desire you to accept of them in that latitude, which is already allowed them. By the last Poems in the book, were not that mistake here prevented, you would judge all to be fatherless, and the Edition posthume ; for indeed I was nigh unto death, and am still at no great distance from it ; which was the necessary reason for that solemn and accomplished dress, you will finde this impression in.

But the God of the spirits of all flesh hath granted me a further use of mine than I did look for in the body ; and when I expected, and had by his assistance prepared for, a message of death, then did he answer me with life ; I hope to his glory, and my great advantage ; that I may flourish not with leafe onely, but with some fruit also ; which hope and earnest desire of his poor Creature, I humbly beseech him to perfect and fulfil for his dear Son's sake, unto Whom, with Him and the most holy and loving Spirit, be ascribed by Angels, by Men, and by all his Works, All Glory, and Wisdom, and Dominion, in this the temporal and in the Eternal Being. Amen.

Newton by Ufk, near Sketh-Rock,
Septem. 30, 1654.

 Lord, the hope of Israel, all they that forsake thee shall be ashamed; and they that depart from thee, shall be written in the earth, because they have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living waters.

Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved, for thou art my health, and my great deliverer.

I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave; I have deprived my self of the residue of my years.

I said, I shall not see the Lord, even the Lord in the Land of the living: I shall behold man no more with the Inhabitants of the world.

O Lord! by thee doth man live, and from thee is the life of my spirit: therefore wilt thou recover me, and make me to live.

Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back.

For thy name's sake hast thou put off thine anger; for thy praise hast thou refrained from me, that I should not be cut off.

For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee : they, that go down into the pit, cannot hope for thy truth.

The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day : the Father to the children shall make known thy truth.

O Lord ; thou hast been merciful ; thou hast brought back my life from corruption : thou hast redeemed me from my sin.

They, that follow after lying vanities, forsake their own mercy.

Therefore shall thy songs be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life.

I will go unto the altar of my God, unto God, the joy of my youth ; and in thy fear will I worship towards thy holy temple.

I will sacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving ; I will pay that which I have vowed ; salvation is of the Lord.

To my most merciful, my most loving,
and dearly loved Redeemer, the ever blessed, the onely Holy and JUST ONE,
J E S U S C H R I S T,
The Son of the living GOD, and the sacred Virgin Mary.

I.

MY God! thou that didst dye for me,
These thy death's fruits I offer thee;
Death that to me was life and light,
But dark and deep pangs to thy fight.

Some drops of thy all-quickning blood
Fell on my heart; those made it bud,
And put forth thus, though Lord, before
The ground was curst, and void of store.
Indeed I had some here to hire
Which long resisted thy desire,
That ston'd thy servants, and did move
To have thee murthred for thy love;
But Lord, I have expell'd them, and so bent,
Beg, thou wouldst take thy Tenant's Rent.

II.

Dear Lord, 'tis finished ! and now he
That copyed it, presents it thee.
'Twas thine first, and to thee returns,
From thee it shined, though here it burns ;
If the Sun rise on Rocks, is't right,
To call it their inherent light ?
No, nor can I say, this is mine,
For, dearest Jesus, 'tis all thine.
Thy cloaths, when thou with cloaths wert clad
Both light from thee, and virtue had ;
And now, as then within this place,
Thou to poor rags dost still give grace.
This is the earnest thy love sheds,
The Candle shining on some heads,
Till at thy charges they shall be,
Cloath'd all with immortality.

My dear Redeemer, the world's light,
And life too, and my heart's delight !
For all thy mercies and thy truth
Shew'd to me in my sinful youth,
For my sad failings and my wilde
Murmurings at thee, when most milde ;
For all my secret faults, and each
Frequent relapse and wilful breach,
For all designs meant against thee,
And ev'ry publish'd vanity,
Which thou divinely hast forgiven,
While thy blood wash'd me white as heaven :
I nothing have to give to thee,

But this thy own gift, given to me.
Refuse it not ! for now thy Token
Can tell thee where a heart is broken.

Revel. cap. 1. ver. 5, 6, 7.

Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood.

And hath made us Kings and Priests unto God and his Father ; to him be glory and dominion, for ever and ever. Amen.

Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him ; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him : even so. Amen.

V Ain Wits and eyes,
Leave, and be wise :
Abuse not, shun not holy fire,
But with true tears wash off your mire.

Tears and these flames will soon grow kinde,
And mix an eye-salve for the blinde.

Tears cleanse and supple without fail,
And fire will purge your callous veyl.

Then comes the light ! which when you spy,
And see your nakedness thereby,

Praise him, who dealt his gifts so free
In tears to you, in fire to me.

SILEX SCINTILLANS.

PART I.

Silex Scintillans, &c.

Regeneration.

Ward, and still in bonds, one day
I stole abroad ;
It was high-spring, and all the way
Primrosed, and hung with shade ;
Yet was it frost within ;
The furly wind
Blasted my infant buds, and sinne
Like Clouds ecclipsed my mind.

Storm'd thus ; I straight perceived my spring
Meere stage and show,
My walke a monstrous, mountain'd thing
Rough-cast with Rocks and snow ;
And as a Pilgrim's Eye,
Far from reliefe,
Measures the melancholy skye,
Then drops, and rains for griefe,

3.

So sigh'd I upwards still ; at last
"Twixt steps, and falls,
I reach'd the pinnacle, where plac'd

I found a paire of scales ;
I took them up, and layd
 In th' one late paines ;
The other smoake and pleasures weigh'd,
But prov'd the heavier graines.

With that some cryed, Away; straight I
Obey'd, and led
Full East, a faire, fresh field could spy;
Some call'd it, Jacob's Bed;
A Virgin soile, which no
Rude feet ere trod;
Where, since He slept there, only go
Prophets and friends of God.

Here I repos'd ; but scarce well set
A grove descry'd
Of stately height, whose branches met
And mixt on every side ;
I entred, and once in,
Amaz'd to see't,
Found all was chang'd, and a new spring
Did all my senses greet.

The unthrif^t Sunne shot vitall gold
A thousand peeces,
And heaven its azure did unfold
Chequer'd with snowie fleeces.
The aire was all in spice,
And every bush
A garland wore ; Thus fed my Eyes,
But all the Eare lay hush.

Only a little Fountain lent
 Some use for Eares,
 And on the dumbe shades language spent,
 The Musick of her teares ;
 I drew her neere, and found
 The Cisterne full
 Of divers stones, some bright and round,
 Others ill-shap'd and dull.

The first (pray marke,) as quick as light
 Danc'd through the floud ;
 But, th' last more heavy than the night
 Nail'd to the Centre stood ;
 I wonder'd much, but tyr'd
 At last with thought,
 My restless Eye, that still desir'd,
 As strange an object brought.

It was a banke of flowers, where I descried
 (Though 'twas mid-day,)
 Some fast asleepe, others broad-eyed,
 And taking in the Ray ;
 Here musing long I heard
 A rushing wind,
 Which still increas'd, but whence it stirr'd,
 No where I could not find.

10.

I turn'd me round, and to each shade
 Dispatch'd an Eye,
 To see if any leafe had made
 Least motion or Reply ;

But while I listning fought
 My mind to ease
 By knowing, where 'twas, or where not,
 It whisper'd ; Where I please.

Lord, then said I, *On me one breath,
 And let me dye before my death !*

Cant. cap. 5. ver. 17.

Arise, O North, and come thou South-wind, and blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out.

Death. A Dialogue.

Soule.

 Is a sad Land, that in one day
 Hath dull'd thee thus, when death shall freeze
 Thy blood to Ice, and thou must stay
 Tenant for Yeares, and Centuries ;
 How wilt thou brook't?—

Body.

I cannot tell ;
 But if all fence wings not with thee,
 And something still be left the dead,
 I'll wish my Curtaines off, to free
 Me from so darke and sad a bed ;

A nest of nights, a gloomie sphere,
 Where shadowes thicken, and the Cloud
 Sits on the Sun's brow all the yeare,
 And nothing moves without a shrowd.

Soule.

'Tis so: But as thou sawest that night
Wee travell'd in, our first attempts
Were dull and blind, but Custome straight
Our fears and falls brought to contempt.

Then, when the ghastly twelve was past,
We breath'd still for a blushing East,
And bad the lazie Sunne make haste,
And on sure hopes, though long, did feast.

But when we saw the Clouds to crack,
And in those Cranies light appear'd,
We thought the day then was not slack,
And pleas'd our selves with what wee feared.

Just so it is in death. But thou
Shalt in thy mother's bosome sleepe,
Whilst I each minute grone to know
How neere Redemption creepes.

Then shall wee meet to mixe again, and met,
'Tis last good-night; our Sunne shall never set.

Job. Cap. 10. ver. 21. 22.

Before I goe whence I shall not returne, even to the land of darknesse, and the shadow of death;

A Land of darknesse, as darknesse it selfe, and of the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darknesse.

Refurrection and Immortality :

Heb. cap. 10. ver. 20.

By that new, and living way, which he hath prepared for us, through the veile, which is his flesh.

Body.

I.

Oft have I seen, when that renewing breath,
That binds and loosens death,
Inspir'd a quickning power through the dead
Creatures abed,
Some drowsie silk-worme creepe
From that long sleepe,
And in weake, infant hummings chime, and knell
About her silent Cell,
Until at last full with the vitall Ray
She wing'd away,
And proud with life, and sence,
Heaven's rich Expence,
Esteem'd (vaine things !) of two whole Elements
As meane, and span-extents.
Shall I then thinke such providence will be
Lesse friend to me ?
Or that he can endure to be unjust
Who keeps his Covenant even with our dust.

2.

Poore, querulous handfull ! was't for this
I taught thee all that is ?

Unbowel'd nature shew'd thee her recruits,
And Change of suits,
And how of death we make
A meere mistake ;
For no thing can to Nothing fall, but still Incorporates by skill,
And then returns, and from the wombe of things
Such treasure brings,
As Phenix-like renew'th
Both life, and youth ;
For a preserving spirit doth still passe
Untainted through this Masse,
Which doth resolve, produce, and ripen all
That to it fall ;
Nor are those births, which we
Thus suffering see,
Destroy'd at all ; But when time's restless wave
Their substance doth deprave,
And the more noble Essence finds his house
Sickly and loose,
He, ever young, doth wing
Unto that spring,
And source of spirits, where he takes his lot,
Till time no more shall rot
His passive Cottage ; which (though laid aside,)
Like some spruce Bride,
Shall one day rise, and cloath'd with shining light
All pure, and bright,
Re-marry to the soule, for 'tis most plaine
Thou only fal'st to be refin'd againe.

3.

Then I that here saw darkly in a glasse
But mists and shadows passe,

Both stars and Elements confound,
And quite blot out their names,—

When thou shalt spend thy sacred store
Of thunders in that heate,
And low as ere they lay before
Thy six-dayes' building beate, —

When like a scrowle the heavens shall passe
And vanish cleane away,
And nought must stand of that vast space
Which held up night and day,—

When one lowd blast shall rend the deepe,
And from the wombe of earth
Summon up all that are asleepe
Unto a second birth,—

When thou shalt make the Clouds thy seate,
And in the open aire
The Quick and dead, both small and great,
Must to thy barre repaire ;

O then it will be all too late
To say, What shall I doe?
Repentance there is out of date,
And so is mercy too.

Prepare, prepare me then, O God !
And let me now begin
To feele my loving father's Rod
Killing the man of sinne !

Give me, O give me Crosses here,
Still more afflictions lend !

That pill, though bitter, is most deare
That brings health to the end.

Lord, God ! I beg nor friends, nor wealth,
But pray against them both ;
Three things I'de have, my soule's chief health,
And one of these femes loath,

A living FAITH, a HEART of flesh,
The WORLD an Enemy ;
This last will keepe the first two fresh,
And bring me where I'de be.

1 Pet. 4. 7.

The end of all things is at hand ; be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

Religion.

MY God, when I walke in those groves
And leaves thy Spirit doth still fan,
I see in each shade that there growes
An Angell talking with a man.

Under a Juniper some house,
Or the coole Mirtle's canopie,
Others beneath an Oake's green boughs,
Or at some fountaine's bubbling Eye.

Here Jacob dreames, and wrestles ; there
Elias is by Ravens fed,
Another time by th' Angell, where
He brings him water with his bread.

In Abraham's Tent the winged guests
(O how familiar then was heaven !)
Eate, drinke, discourse, sit downe, and rest
Until the Coole, and shady Even.

Nay thou thy selfe, my God, in fire,
Whirle-winds, and Clouds, and the soft voice,
Speak'st there so much, that I admire
We have no Conference in these daies.

Is the truce broke? or 'cause we have
A Mediatour now with thee,
Dost thou therefore old Treaties wave,
And by appeales from him decree?

Or is't so, as some green heads say,
That now all miracles must cease?
Though thou hast promis'd they should stay,
The tokens of the Church, and peace.

No, no; Religion is a Spring,
That from some secret, golden Mine
Derives her birth, and thence doth bring
Cordials in every drop, and Wine.

But in her long, and hidden Course,
In passing through the Earth's darke veines,
Growes still from better unto worse,
And both her taste and colour stains;

Then drilling on learns to encrease
False Ecchoes and Confused sounds,
And unawares doth often seize
On veines of Sulphur under ground;

So poison'd breaks forth in some Clime,
 And at first sight doth many please ;
 But drunk, is puddle or meere slime,
 And 'stead of Phisick, a disease,

Just such a tainted sink we have,
 Like that Samaritan's dead well ;
 For must we for the Kernell crave
 Because most voices like the shell?

Heale then these waters, Lord ; or bring thy flock,
 Since these are troubled, to the springing rock ;
 Looke downe great Master of the feast ; O shine,
 And turn once more our Water into Wine !

Cant. cap. 4. ver. 12.

My sister, my spouse is as a garden Inclosed, as a Spring shut up, and a fountain sealed.

The Search.

Is now cleare day : I see a Rose
 Bud in the bright East, and disclose
 The Pilgrim-Sunne ; all night have I
 Spent in a roving Extasie
 To find my Saviour ; I have been
 As far as Bethlem, and have seen
 His Inne and Cradle ; Being there
 I met the Wise-Men, askt them where
 He might be found, or what starre can
 Now point him out, grown up a Man ?

To Egypt hence I fled, ran o're
All her parcht bosome to Nile's shore,
Her yearly nurse; came back, enquir'd
Amongst the Doctors, and desir'd
To see the Temple, but was shewn
A little dust, and for the Town
A heap of ashes, where some sed
A small bright sparkle was a bed,
Which would one day beneath the pole,
Awake, and then refine the whole.

Tyr'd here, I came to Sychar; thence
To Jacob's well, bequeathed since
Unto his sonnes, where often they
In those calme, golden Evenings lay
Watring their flocks, and having spent
Those white dayes, drove home to the Tent
Their well-fleeced traine; And here (O fate!)
I sit, where once my Saviour fate.
The angry Spring in bubbles swell'd,
Which broke in sighes still, as they fill'd,
And whisper'd, Jesus had been there,
But Jacob's children would not heare.
Loath hence to part, at last I rise
But with the fountain in mine Eyes,
And here a fresh search is decreed;
He must be found where he did bleed.
I walke the garden, and there see
Idæas of his Agonie,
And moving anguishments, that set
His blest face in a bloody sweat;
I climbed the Hill, perus'd the Crosse,
Hung with my gaine, and his great losse;
Never did tree beare fruit like this,
Balsam of soules, the body's blisse.

But, O his grave! where I saw lent
 (For he had none,) a Monument,
 An undefil'd, a new-hew'd one,
 But there was not the Corner-stone.
 Sure then, said I, my Quest is vaine,
 Hee'le not be found where he was slaine;
 So mild a Lamb can never be
 'Midst so much bloud and Crueltie.
 I'le to the wildernes, and can
 Find beasts more mercifull than man;
 He liv'd there safe, 'twas his retreat
 From the fierce Jew, and Herod's heat;
 And forty dayes withstood the fell,
 And high temptations of hell;
 With Seraphins there talked he,
 His father's flaming ministrie;
 He heav'nd their walks, and with his eyes
 Made those wild shades a Paradise.
 Thus was the desert sanctified
 To be the refuge of his bride.
 I'le thither then; see, It is day!
 The Sun's broke through to guide my way.

But as I urg'd thus, and writ down
 What pleasures should my Journey crown,
 What silent paths, what shades, and Cells,
 Faire, virgin-flowers, and hallow'd Wells
 I should rove in, and rest my head
 Where my deare Lord did often tread,
 Sugring all dangers with successe,
 Methought I heard one singing thus;

I.

Leave, leave thy gadding thoughts;
 Who pores

and spies
Still out of Doores, descries
Within them nought.

2.

The skinne and shell of things,
Though faire,
are not Thy wish, nor Pray'r, but got
By meere Despaire of wings.

To rack old Elements,
Or Dust;
and fay,
Sure here he must needs stay,
Is not the way,
nor Just.

Search well another world ; who studies this,
Travels in Clouds, seekes Manna where none is.

Acts Cap. 17. ve. 27, 28.

That they should seeke the Lord, if happily they might feele after him, and find him, though he be not far off from every one of us, for in him we live, and move, and have our being.

Isaac's Marriage.

Gen. cap. 24. ver. 63.

And Isaac went out to pray in the field at the Even-tide, and he lift up his eyes, and saw, and behold, the Camels were comming.

P Raying! and to be married! It was rare,
But now 'tis monstrous; and that pious care,

Though of ourselves, is so much out of
That to renew't were to degenerate. [date,
But thou a Chosen sacrifice wert given,
And offer'd up so early unto heaven,
Thy flames could not be out; Religion was
Ray'd into thee like beames into a glasse,
Where, as thou grewst, it multiply'd, and shin'd
The sacred Constellation of thy mind.

But being for a bride, sure, prayer was
Very strange stuffe wherewith to court thy lass;e;
Had'st ne'r an oath, nor Complement? thou wert
An odde, coarse sutor; Hadst thou but the art
Of these our dayes, thou couldst have coyn'd thee twenty

New sev'rall oathes, and Complements too plenty.
O sad, and wild excesse! and happy those
White dayes, that durst no impious mirth expose!
When sinne, by sinning oft, had not lost sence,
Nor bold-fac'd custome banish'd Innocence!
Thou hadst no pompous traine, nor Antick crowd
Of young, gay swearers, with their needles, lowd

Retinue ; All was here smooth as thy bride,
 And calme like her, or that mild Evening-tide.
 Yet hadst thou nobler guests : Angels did wind,
 And rove about thee, guardians of thy mind ;
 These fetch'd thee home thy bride, and all the way
 Advis'd thy servant what to doe and say ;
 These taught him at the Well, and thither brought
 The Chaste and lovely object of thy thought.
 But here was ne'r a Complement, not one
 Spruce, supple cringe, or study'd looke put on.
 All was plaine, modest truth : Nor did she come
 In rowles and Curles, mincing and stately dumbe ;
 But in a frighted, virgin-blush approach'd
 Fresh as the morning, when 'tis newly Coach'd.
 O sweet, divine simplicity ! O grace
 Beyond a Curled lock, or painted face !
 A Pitcher too she had, nor thought it much
 To carry that, which some would scorn to touch ;
 With which in mild, chaste language she did wooe
 To draw him drinke, and for his Camels too.

And now thou knewst her comming, It was time
 To get thee wings on, and devoutly climbe
 Unto thy God ; for Marriage of all states
 Makes most unhappy, or most fortunates.
 This brought thee forth, where now thou didst undresse

Thy soule, and with new pinions refresh
 Her wearied wings, which so restor'd did flye
 Above the stars, a track unknown and high ;
 And in her piercing flight perfum'd the ayre,
 Scatt'ring the Myrrhe and Incense of thy pray'r.
 So from Labai-roi's* Well some spicie cloud,

* A wel in the South Country where Jacob dwelt, betweene
Cadesh, & Bered ; Heb. the wel of him that liveth and seeth me.

Woo'd by the Sun, fwels up to be his shrowd,
 And from her moist wombe weeps a fragrant showre,
 Which, scatter'd in a thousand pearls, each flowre
 And herb partakes; where having stood awhile
 And something could the parch'd and thirstie Isle,
 The thankfull Earth unlocks her selfe, and blends
 A thousand odours, which, all mixt, she sends
 Up in one cloud, and so returnes the skies
 That dew they lent, a breathing sacrifice.

Thus soar'd thy soul, who, though young, didst inherit

Together with his blood thy father's spirit,
 Whose active zeale and tryed faith were to thee
 Familiar ever since thy Infancie.
 Others were tym'd and train'd up to't, but thou
 Didst thy swift years in piety out-grow.
 Age made them rev'rend, and a snowie head,
 But thou wert so, e're time his snow could shed.
 Then, who would truly limne thee out, must paint
 First a young Patriarch, then a marry'd Saint.

The Brittish Church.

H! he is fled!
 And while these here their mists and shadowes hatch,
 My glorious Head
 Doth on those hills of Myrrhe and Incense watch.
 Hast, hast, my deare!
 The Souldiers here
 Cast in their lotts againe.
 That seamless coat,

The Jewes touch'd not,
These dare divide and staine.

O get thee wings!
Or if as yet, untill these clouds depart,
And the day springs,
Thou think'st it good to tarry where thou art,
Write in thy bookes
My ravish'd looks,
Slain flock and pillag'd fleeces,
And haste thee so
As a young Roe
Upon the mounts of spices.

O Rosa Campi! O lilium Convallium! quomodo nunc facta es pabulum Aprorum!

The Lampe.

 Is dead night round about: Horreur doth creepe
And move on with the shades; stars nod and sleepe,
And through the dark aire spin a firie thread,
Such as doth gild the lazie glow-worm's bed.
Yet burn'st thou here a full day, while I spend
My rest in Cares, and to the dark world lend
These flames, as thou dost thine to me; I watch
That houre, which must thy life and mine dispatch.
But still thou dost out-goe me, I can see
Met in thy flames all acts of piety;

Leaves me a slave to passions and my fate.

Besides I've lost

A traine of lights, which in those Sun-shine dayes

Were my sure guides, and only with me stayes,

Unto my cost,

One fullen beame, whose charge is to dispense

More punishment than knowledge to my sense.

Two thousand yeares

I sojourn'd thus. At last Jeshurun's King

Those famous tables did from Sinai bring.

These swell'd my feares,

GUILTS, trespasses, and all this Inward Awe ;

For sinne tooke strength, and vigour from the Law.

Yet have I found

A plenteous way, (thanks to that Holy One !)

To cancell all that e're was writ in stone.

His saving wound

Wept bloud, that broke this Adamant, and gave

To sinners Confidence, life to the grave.

This makes me span

My fathers' journeys, and in one faire step

O're all their pilgrimage and labours leap.

For God, made man,

Reduc'd th' Extent of works of faith ; so made

Of their Red Sea a Spring ; I wash, they wade.

Rom. Cap. 18. ver. 19.

As by the offence of one, the fault came on all men to condemnation ; So by the Righteousness of one, the benefit abounded towards all men to the Justification of life.

The Showre.

 Was so ; I saw thy birth. That drowfie
 Lake
 From her faint bosome breath'd thee, the diseafe
 Of her sick waters, and Infectious Ease.
 But now at Even,
 Too grosse for heaven,
 Thou fall'st in teares, and weep'st for thy mistake.

2.

Ah ! it is so with me ; oft have I prest
 Heaven with a lazie breath ; but fruitles this Peirc'd not ; Love only can with quick accesse
 Unlock the way,
 When all else stray,
 The smoke and Exhalations of the brest.

3.

Yet if, as thou doest melt, and with thy traine
 Of drops make soft the Earth, my eyes could weep
 O're my hard heart, that's bound up and asleep ;
 Perhaps at last,
 Some such showres past,
 My God would give a Sun-shine after raine.

Distraction.

Knit me, that am crumbled dust! the heape

Is all dispers'd and cheape;
Give for a handfull but a thought,
And it is bought.

Hadst thou

Made me a starre, a pearle, or a rain-bow,
The beames I then had shot
My light had lessend not;

But now

I find my selfe the lesse the more I grow.

The world

Is full of voices; Man is call'd, and hurl'd
By each; he answers all,
Knows ev'ry note and call;

Hence still

Fresh dotage tempts, or old usurps his will.

Yet hadst thou clipt my wings, when Coffin'd in
This quicken'd masse of sinne,
And saved that light, which freely thou
Didst then bestow,

I feare

I should have spurn'd, and said thou didst forbear,
Or that thy store was lesse.

But now since thou didst blesse

So much,

I grieve, my God! that thou hast made me such.

I grieve?

O, yes! thou know'st I doe; Come, and relieve,

And tame, and keepe downe with thy light,
 Dust that would rise and dimme my sight!
 Left left alone too long
 Amidst the noise and throng,
 Oppressed I,
 Striving to save the whole, by parcells dye.

The Pursuite.

Lord! what a busie, restless thing
 Hast thou made man!
 Each day and houre he is on wing,
 Rests not a span.
 Then having lost the Sunne and light,
 By clouds surpriz'd,
 He keeps a Commerce in the night
 With aire disguis'd.
 Hadst thou given to this active dust
 A state untir'd,
 The lost Sonne had not left the huske,
 Nor home desir'd.
 That was thy secret, and it is
 Thy mercy too;
 For when all failes to bring to blisse,
 Then this must doe.
 Ah! Lord! and what a Purchase will that be,
 To take us sick, that sound would not take thee!

Mount of Olives.

 Weete, sacred hill ! on whose fair brow
 My Saviour fate, shall I allow
 Language to love
 And Idolize some shade or grove,
 Neglecting thee ? such ill-plac'd wit,
 Conceit, or call it what you please,
 Is the braine's fit,
 And meere disease.

2.

Cotswold, and Cooper's both have met
 With learned swaines, and Eccho yet
 Their pipes, and wit ;
 But thou sleep'st in a deepe neglect,
 Untouch'd by any ; And what need
 The sheep bleat thee a filly Lay,
 That heard'st both reed
 And sheepward play ?

3.

Yet if Poets mind thee well,
 They shall find thou art their hill,
 And fountaine too.
 Their Lord with thee had most to doe.
 He wept once, waked whole nights on thee :
 And from thence (his sufferings ended,)
 Unto glorie
 Was attended.

4.

Being there, this spacious ball
 Is but his narrow footstoole all;
 And what we thinke
 Unsearchable, now with one winke
 He doth comprise. But in this aire
 When he did stay to beare our Ill
 And finne, this Hill
 Was then his Chaire.

The Incarnation, and Passion.

ord! when thou didst thyselfe undresse,
 Laying by thy robes of glory,
 To make us more thou wouldst be lesse,
 And becam'st a wofull story.

To put on Clouds instead of light,
 And cloath the morning-starre with dust,
 Was a translation of such height
 As, but in thee, was ne'r exprest.

Brave wormes and Earth! that thus could have
 A God Enclos'd within your Cell,
 Your maker pent up in a grave,
 Life lockt in death, heav'n in a shell!

Ah, my deare Lord! what couldst thou spye
 In this impure, rebellious clay,
 That made thee thus resolve to dye
 For those that kill thee every day?

O what strange wonders could thee move
 To flight thy precious bloud, and breath?
 Sure it was Love, my Lord; for Love
 Is only stronger far than death!

The Call.

Come, my heart! come, my head,
 In sighes, and teares!
 'Tis now, since you have laine thus dead,
 Some twenty years.
 Awake, awake,
 Some pitty take
 Upon your selves!

Who never wake to grone nor weepe,
 Shall be sentenc'd for their sleepe.

Doe but see your sad estate,
 How many sands
 Have left us, while we careles fate
 With folded hands;
 What stock of nights,
 Of dayes, and yeares
 In silent flights
 Stole by our eares;
 How ill have we our selves bestow'd,
 Whose suns are all set in a Cloud!

3.

Yet, come, and let's peruse them all;
 And as we passe,

What fins on every minute fall
 Score on the glasse;
 Then weigh and rate
 Their heavy State,
 Untill
 The glasse with teares you fill;
 That done, we shall be safe and good,
 Those beasts were cleane that chew'd the Cud.

 Hou that know'st for whom I mourne,
 And why these teares appeare,
 That keep'st account till the returne
 Of all his dust left here;
 As easily thou might'st prevent,
 As now produce, these teares,
 And adde unto that day he went
 A faire supply of yeares.
 But 'twas my sinne that forc'd thy hand
 To cull this Prim-rose out,
 That by thy early choice forewarn'd
 My soule might looke about.
 O what a vanity is man!
 How like the Eye's quick winke
 His Cottage failes, whose narrow span
 Begins even at the brink!
 Nine months thy hands are fashioning us,
 And many yeares alas!
 E're we can lisp, or ought discusse
 Concerning thee, must passe;
 Yet have I knowne thy slightest things,
 A feather, or a shell,

A stick, or Rod, which some Chance brings,
The best of us excell.
Yea, I have knowne these shreds out last
A faire-compacted frame,
And for one Twenty we have past
Almost outlive our name.
Thus hast thou plac'd in man's outside
Death to the Common Eye,
That heaven within him might abide,
And close eternitie.
Hence youth and folly, man's first shame,
Are put unto the slaughter,
And serious thoughts begin to tame
The wise-man's madness, Laughter.
Dull, wretched wormes! that would not keepe
Within our first faire bed,
But out of Paradise must creepe
For ev'ry foote to tread!
Yet had our Pilgrimage bin free,
And smooth without a thorne,
Pleasures had foil'd Eternitie,
And tares had choakt the Corne.
Thus by the Crosse Salvation runnes;
Affliction is a mother,
Whose painfull throes yield many sons,
Each fairer than the other.
A silent teare can peirce thy throne,
When lowd Joyes want a wing;
And sweeter aires streame from a grone,
Than any arted string.
Thus, Lord, I see my gaine is great,
My losse but little to it;
Yet something more I must intreate,
And only thou canst doe it.

O let me, like him, know my End,
 And be as glad to find it!
 And whatfoe'r thou shalt Commend,
 Still let thy fervant mind it!
 Then make my foule white as his owne,
 My faith as pure and steddy,
 And deck me, Lord, with the same Crowne
 That has crownd him already!

Vanity of Spirit.

Uite spent with thoughts I left my Cell, and lay
 Where a shrill spring tun'd to the early day.
 I beg'd here long, and gron'd to know
 Who gave the Clouds so brave a bow,
 Who bent the spheres, and circled in
 Corruption with this glorious Ring;
 What is his name, and how I might
 Descry some part of his great light.
 I summon'd nature; peirc'd through all her store;
 Broke up some seales, which none had touch'd before;
 Her wombe, her bosome, and her head,
 Where all her secrets lay a bed,
 I rifled quite, and having past
 Through all the Creatures, came at last
 To search myselfe, where I did find
 Traces, and sounds of a strange kind.
 Here of this mighty spring I found some drills,
 With Ecchoes beaten from th' eternall hills.
 Weake beames and fires flash'd to my sight,

Like a young East, or Moone-shine night,
 Wich shew'd me in a nook cast by
 A peece of much antiquity,
 With Hyeroglyphicks quite dismembred,
 And broken letters scarce remembred.
 I tooke them up, and, much Joy'd, went about
 T' unite those peeces, hoping to find out
 The mystery; but this near done,
 That little light I had was gone.
 It griev'd me much. At last, said I,
Since in these weyls my Ecclips'd Eye
May not approach thee, (for at night
Who can have commerce with the light?)
I'll disapparell, and to buy
But one half glaunce most gladly dye.

The Retreat.

 Appy those early dayes, when I
 Shin'd in my Angell-infancy!
 Before I understood this place
 Appointed for my second race,
 Or taught my soul to fancy ought
 But a white, Celestiall thought;
 When yet I had not walkt above
 A mile or two from my first love,
 And looking back, at that short space,
 Could see a glimpse of his bright-face;
 When on some gilded Cloud or flowre
 My gazing soul would dwell an houre,
 And in those weaker glories spy

Some shadows of eternity ;
 Before I taught my tongue to wound
 My Conscience with a sinfull sound,
 Or had the black art to dispence
 A sev'rall sinne to ev'ry sence,
 But felt through all this fleshly dresse
 Bright shootes of everlastingnesse.

O how I long to travell back,
 And tread again that ancient track !
 That I might once more reach that plaine,
 Where first I left my glorious traine ;
 From whence th' Inlightned spirit sees
 That shady City of Palme trees.
 But ah ! my soul with too much stay
 Is drunk, and staggers in the way !
 Some men a forward motion love,
 But I by backward steps would move ;
 And when this dust falls to the urn,
 In that state I came return.

Ome, come ! what doe I here ?

Since he is gone
 Each day is grown a dozen year,
 And each houre one.

Come, come !

Cut off the fum

By these foil'd tears !

(Which only thou

Know'st to be true,)

Dayes are my feares.

2.

There's not a wind can stir,
 Or beam passe by,
 But strait I think, though far,
 Thy hand is nigh.
 Come, come!
 Strike these lips dumb:
 This restless breath,
 That foiles thy name,
 Will ne'r be tame
 Untill in death.

3.

Perhaps some think a tombe
 No house of store,
 But a dark, seal'd up wombe,
 Which ne'r breeds more.
 Come, come!
 Such thoughts benum,
 But I would be
 With him I weep
 A-bed, and sleep
 To wake in thee.

¶ Midnight.

Hen to my Eyes,
 Whilst deep sleep others catches,
 Thine host of spyes,
 The starres, shine in their watches,
 I doe survey
 Each busie Ray,

And how they work and wind,
 And with each beame
 My soul doth stream
 With the like ardour shin'd.
 What Emanations,
 Quick vibrations,
 And bright stirs are there!
 What thin Ejections,
 Cold Affections,
 And flow motions here!

2.

Thy heav'ns, some say,
 Are a fire-liquid light,
 Which mingling aye
 Streames and flames thus to the fight.
 Come then, my God!
 Shine on this bloud
 And water in one beame;
 And thou shalt see
 Kindled by thee
 Both liquors burne and streame.
 O what bright quickness,
 Active brightness,
 And celestiall flowes,
 Will follow after
 On that water,
 Which thy Spirit blowes!

Math. Cap. 3. ver. xi.

*I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance, but he that commeth after me, is mightier than I;
 whose shoes I am not worthy to beare; he shall baptize you with the holy Ghost, and with fire.*

¶ Content.

PEace, peace ! I know 'twas brave ;
 But this coarſe fleece,
 I ſhelter in, is ſlave
 To no ſuch peece.
 When I am gone,
 I ſhall no wardrobes leave
 To friend or ſonne,
 But what their own homes weave.

2.

Such, though not proud nor full,
 May make them weep,
 And mourn to ſee the wooll
 Outlaſt the ſheep ;
 Poore, Pious, weare !
 Hadſt thou bin rich, or fine,
 Perhaps that teare
 Had mourn'd thy loſſe, not mine.

3.

Why then theſe curl'd, puff'd points,
 Or a laced ſtory ?
 Death ſets all out of Joint,
 And ſcornes their glory.
 Some Love a Roſe
 In hand, ſome in the ſkin ;
 But, croſſe to thoſe,
 I would have mine within.

Oy of my life while left me here!
 And still my Love!
 How in thy absence thou dost steere
 Me from above!
 A life well lead
 This truth commends,
 With quick or dead
 It never ends.

2.

Stars are of mighty use: The night
 Is dark, and long;
 The Rode foul; and where one goes right,
 Six may go wrong.
 One twinkling ray,
 Shot o'er some cloud,
 May clear much way,
 And guide a croud.

3.

Gods Saints are shining lights: who stays
 Here long must passe
 O're dark hills, swift streames, and steep ways
 As smooth as glasse;
 But these all night,
 Like Candles, shed
 Their beams, and light
 Us into Bed.

They are indeed our Pillar-fires,
 Seen as we go;

They are that Citie's shining spires
 We travell to.
 A swordlike gleame
 Kept man from sin
 First Out; This beame
 Will guide him In.

The Storm.

See the use: and know my bloud
 Is not a Sea,
 But a shallow, bounded flood,
 Though red as he;

Yet have I flows as strong as his,
 And boyling stremes that rave
 With the same curling force and hisse,
 As doth the mountained wave.

But when his waters billow thus,
 Dark storms and wind
 Incite them to that fierce discusse,
 Else not Inclined.
 Thus the Enlarg'd, intraged air
 Uncalmes these to a flood;
 But still the weather that's most fair
 Breeds tempests in my bloud.

3.

Lord, round me then with weeping Clouds,
 And let my mind
 In quick blasts sigh beneath those shrouds,
 A spirit-wind;

So shall that storme purge this Recluse
 Which sinfull ease made foul,
 And wind and water to thy use
 Both wash, and wing my foul.

The Morning-watch.

Joyes! Infinite sweetnes! with what flowres
 And shoots of glory my soul breakes and buds!
 All the long houres
 Of night and Rest,
 Through the still shrouds
 Of sleep and Clouds,
 This Dew fell on my Breast;
 O how it Blouds,
 And Spirits all my Earth! heark! In what Rings,
 And Hymning Circulations the quick world
 Awakes and sings!
 The rising winds,
 And falling springs,
 Birds, beasts, all things
 Adore him in their kinds.
 Thus all is hurl'd
 In sacred Hymnes and Order, the great Chime
 And Symphony of nature. Prayer is
 The world in tune,
 A spirit-voyce,
 And vocall joyes,
 Whose Eccho is heav'ns blisse.
 O let me climbe

When I lye down ! The Pious soul by night
 Is like a clouded starre, whose beames, though said
 To shed their light
 Under some Cloud,
 Yet are above,
 And shine and move
 Beyond that mistie shrowd,
 So in my Bed,
 That Curtain'd grave, though sleep, like ashes, hide
 My lamp and life, both shall in thee abide.

The Evening-watch.

A Dialogue.

Body.

Farewell ! I goe to sleep ; but when
 The day-star springs, I'll wake agen.

Soul.

Goe, sleep in peace ; and when thou lye'st
 Unnumber'd in thy dust, when all this frame
 Is but one dramme, and what thou now descriest
 In sev'rall parts shall want a name,
 Then may his peace be with thee, and each dust
 Writ in his book, who ne'r betray'd man's trust !

Body.

Amen ! but hark, eer we two stray,
 How many hours dost think 'till day ?

Soul.

Ah ! go ; thou'rt weak, and sleepe. Heav'n.

Is a plain watch, and without figures winds
All ages up ; who drew this Circle, even

He, fills it ; Dayes and hours are Blinds.
Yet this take with thee ; The last gasp of time
Is thy first breath, and man's eternall Prime.

Silence and stealth of dayes ! 'tis now,
Since thou art gone,
Twelve hundred houres, and not a brow
But Clouds hang on.
As he that in some Cave's thick damp,
Lockt from the light,
Fixeth a solitary lamp,
To brave the night,
And walking from his Sun, when past
That glim'ring Ray,
Cuts through the heavy mists in haste
Back to his day ;
So o'er fled minutes I retreat
Unto that hour,
Which shew'd thee last, but did defeat
Thy light and pow'r.
I search, and rack my soul to see
Those beams again ;
But nothing but the snuff to me
Appareth plain.
That, dark and dead, sleeps in its known,
And common urn ;
But those, fled to their Maker's throne,
There shine and burn.
O could I track them ! but souls must

Track one the other ;
 And now the spirit, not the dust,
 Must be thy brother.
 Yet I have one Pearle, by whose light
 All things I see ;
 And in the heart of Earth and night
 Find Heaven, and thee.

Church-Service.

Left be the God of Harmony and Love !
 The God above !
 And holy Dove !

Whose Interceding, spirituall grones
 Make restless mones
 For dust and stones ;
 For dust in every part,
 But a hard, stonie heart.

2.

O how in this thy Quire of Souls I stand,
 Propt by thy hand,
 A heap of sand !
 Which busie thoughts, like winds, would scatter quite,
 And put to flight,
 But for thy might ;
 Thy hand alone doth tame
 Those blasts, and knit my frame ;

3.

So that both stones and dust, and all of me
 Joyntly agree
 To cry to thee ;

And in this Mufick, by thy Martyrs' bloud
 Seal'd and made good,
 Present, O God,
 The Eccho of thefe stones,
 My fighes, and grones !

Buriall.

Thou ! the first fruits of the dead,
 And their dark bed,
 When I am cast into that deep
 And senseless sleep,
 The wages of my sinne,
 O then,
 Thou great Preserver of all men,
 Watch o're that loose
 And empty house,
 Which I sometimes liv'd in !

2.

It is in truth a ruin'd peece,
 Not worth thy Eyes ;
 And scarce a room, but wind and rain
 Beat through and stain
 The seats, and Cells within ;
 Yet thou
 Led by thy Love wouldst stoop thus low,
 And in this Cott,
 All filth and spott,
 Didst with thy servant Inne.

3.

And nothing can, I hourly fee,
 Drive thee from me.
 Thou art the same, faithfull and just,
 In life or Dust.
 Though then thus crumm'd I stray
 In blasts,
 Or Exhalations, and wafts,
 Beyond all Eyes
 Yet thy love spies
 That Change, and knows thy Clay.

The world's thy boxe : how then, there tost,
 Can I be lost ?
 But the delay is all ; Tyme now
 Is old and flow ;
 His wings are dull and sickly.
 Yet he
 Thy fervant is, and waits on thee.
 Cutt then the summe,
 Lord, haste, Lord, come,
 O come, Lord Jesus, quickly !

Rom. Cap. 8. ver. 23.

And not only they, but our selves also, which have the first fruits of the spirit, even wee our selves grone within our selves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.

Chearfulness.

Lord, with what courage and delight
 I doe each thing,
 When thy least breath sustaines my wing!
 I shine and move
 Like those above,
 And, with much gladnesse
 Quitting sadnesse,
 Make me faire dayes of every night.

Affliction thus meere pleasure is;
 And hap what will,
 If thou be in't, 'tis welcome still.
 But since thy rayes
 In Sunnie dayes
 Thou dost thus lend,
 And freely spend,
 Ah! what shall I return for this?

3.

O that I were all Soul! that thou
 Wouldst make each part
 Of this poor sinfull frame pure heart!
 Then would I drown
 My single one;
 And to thy praise
 A Concert raise
 Of Hallelujahs here below.

 Ure, there's a tye of Bodyes ! and as they
 Dissolve with it to Clay,
 Love languisheth, and memory doth rust
 O'r-cast with that cold dust ;
 For things thus Center'd, without Beames or Action,
 Nor give, nor take Contactiō ;
 And man is such a Marygold, these fled,
 That shuts, and hangs the head.

Absents within the Line Conspire, and Sense
 Things distant doth unite ;
 Herbs sleep unto the East, and some fowles thence Watch the Returns of light.
 But hearts are not so kind : false, short delights
 Tell us the world is brave,
 And wrap us in Imaginary flights
 Wide of a faithfull grave.

3.

Thus Lazarus was carried out of town ;
 For 'tis our foe's chief art
 By distance all good objects first to drown,
 And then besiege the heart.
 But I will be my own Death's-head ; and though
 The flatt'rer say, I live,
 Because Incertainties we cannot know,
 Be sure not to believe.

Peace.

MY Soul, there is a Countrie
 Afar beyond the stars,
 Where stands a winged Sentrie
 All skilfull in the wars.

There, above noise and danger,
 Sweet peace fits crown'd with smiles,
 And one born in a Manger
 Commands the Beauteous files.
 He is thy gracious friend
 And (O my Soul awake!)
 Did in pure love descend,
 To die here for thy sake.
 If thou canst get but thither,
 There growes the flowre of peace,
 The Rose that cannot wither,
 Thy fortresse, and thy ease.
 Leave then thy foolish ranges;
 For none can thee secure,
 But One, who never changes,
 Thy God, thy Life, thy Cure.

The Passion.

My chief good!
 My dear, dear God!
 When thy blest blood
 Did issue forth forc'd by the Rod,

What pain didst thou
Feel in each blow !
How didst thou weep,
And thy self steep
In thy own precious, saving teares !
What cruell smart
Did teare thy heart !
How didst thou grone it
In the spirit,
O thou, whom my fowl Loves, and feares !

2.

Most blessed Vine !
Whose juice so good
I feel as Wine,
But thy faire branches felt as bloud,
How wert thou prest
To be my feast !
In what deep anguish
Didst thou languish !
What springs of Sweat and bloud did drown thee !
How in one path
Did the full wrath
Of thy great Father
Crowd and gather,
Doubling thy griefs, when none would own thee !

3.

How did the weight
Of all our finnes,
And death unite
To wrench and Rack thy blessed limbes !
How pale, and bloudie
Lookt thy Body !

How bruis'd, and broke
 With every stroke!
 How meek, and patient was thy spirit!
 How didst thou cry,
 And grone on high
Father forgive,
 And let them live!
 I dye to make my foes inherit!

4.

O blessed Lamb!
 That took'st my sinne,
 That took'st my shame,
 How shall thy dust thy praises sing?
 I would I were
 One hearty teare!
 One constant spring!
 Then would I bring
 Thee two small mites, and be at strife
 Which should most vie,
 My heart, or eye,
 Teaching my years
 In smiles and tears
 To weep, to sing, thy Death, my Life.

Rom. Cap. 8. ver. 19.

Etenim res Creatæ exerto Capite observantes expectant revelationem Filiorum Dei.

And do they so? have they a Sense
 Of ought but Influence?
 Can they their heads lift, and expect,
 And grone too? why th' Elect,

Can do no more : my volumes said
They were all dull, and dead ;
They judg'd them senseless, and their state
Wholly inanimate.
Go, go ; Seal up thy looks,
And burn thy books !

I would I were a stone, or tree,
Or flower by pedigree,
Or some poor high-way herb, or Spring
To flow, or bird to sing !
Then should I, tyed to one sure state,
All day expect my date.
But I am sadly loose, and stray
A giddy blast each way ;
O let me not thus range !
Thou canst not change.

3.

Sometimes I fit with thee, and tarry
An hour or so, then vary.
Thy other Creatures in this Scene
Thee only aim and mean ;
Some rise to seek thee, and with heads
Erect peep from their beds ;
Others, whose birth is in the tomb,
And cannot quit the womb,
Sigh there, and groan for thee,
Their liberty.

O let not me do less ! shall they
Watch, while I sleep or play ?

Shall I thy mercies still abuse
 With fancies, friends, or newes?
 O brook it not! thy bloud is mine,
 And my soul should be thine;
 O brook it not! why wilt thou stop
 After whole showres one drop?
 Sure, thou wilt joy to see
 Thy sheep with thee.

The Relapse.

Y God, how gracious art thou! I had flit
 Almost to hell,
 And on the verge of that dark, dreadful pit
 Did hear them yell;
 But O thy love! thy rich, almighty love,
 That sav'd my soul,
 And checkt their furie, when I saw them move,
 And heard them howl!
 O my soule Comfort, take no more these wayes
 This hideous path,
 And I will mend my own without delayes,
 Cease thou thy wrath!
 I have deserv'd a thick, Egyptian damp,
 Dark as my deeds,
 Should mist within me, and put out that lamp
 Thy spirit feeds;
 A darting Conscience full of stabs and fears;
 No shade but Yewgh,
 Sullen and sad Ecclipses, Cloudie spheres,
 These are my due.

But he that with his blood, (a price too deere,)
 My scores did pay,
 Bid me, by vertue from him, challenge here
 The brightest day ;
 Sweet, downie thoughts, soft Lily-shades, Calm
 Joyes full and true, [streams,
 Fresh, spicie mornings, and eternal beams,—
 These are his due !

The Resolve.

Have consider'd it ; and find
 A longer stay
 Is but excus'd neglect. To mind
 One path, and stray
 Into another, or to none,
 Cannot be love ;
 When shall that traveller come home,
 That will not move ?
 If thou would'st thither, linger not,
 Catch at the place ;
 Tell youth and beauty they must rot,
 They're but a Case ;
 Loose, parcell'd hearts will freeze : The Sun
 With scatter'd locks
 Scarce warms, but by contraction
 Can heat the rocks.
 Call in thy Powers ; run on, and reach
 Home with the light ;
 Be there, before the shadows stretch,
 And Span up night.
 Follow the Cry no more : there is

An ancient way
 All strewed with flowres and happinefs,
 And fresh as May;
 There turn, and turn no more ; Let wits,
 Smile at fair eies,
 Or lips ; But who there weeping fits,
 Hath got the Prize.

The Match.

Ear friend ! whose holy ever-living lines
 Have done much good
 To many, and have checkt my blood,
 My fierce, wild blood, that still heaves,
 and inclines,
 But is still tam'd
 By those bright fires which thee inflam'd ;
 Here I joyn hands, and thrust my stubborn heart
 Into thy Deed,
 There from no Duties to be freed,
 And if hereafter youth or folly thwart
 And claim their share,
 Here I renounce the pois'nous ware.

II.

A Ccept, dread Lord, the poore Oblation ;
 It is but poore ;
 Yet through thy mercies may be more.
 O thou ! that canst not with my soul's damnation,
 Afford me life,
 And save me from all inward strife !

Two Lives I hold from thee, my gracious Lord,
 Both cost thee dear ;
 For one, I am thy Tenant here ;
 The other, the true life, in the next world
 And endless is,
 O let me still mind that in this !
 To thee therefore my Thoughts, Words, Actions
 I do resign ;
 Thy will in all be done, not mine.
 Settle my house, and shut out all distractions
 That may unknit
 My heart, and thee planted in it ;
 Lord Jesu ! thou didst bow thy blessed head
 Upon a tree,
 O do as much, now unto me !
 O hear, and heal thy servant ! Lord, strike dead
 All lusts in me,
 Who onely wish life to serve thee !
 Suffer no more this dust to overflow
 And drown my eies ;
 But seal, or pin them to thy skies.
 And let this grain, which here in tears I sow,
 Though dead and sick,
 Through thy Increase grow new and quick.

Rules and Lessons.

When first thy Eies unveil, give thy foul leave
 To do the like ; our Bodies but forerun
 The Spirit's duty. True hearts spread and heave

Unto their God, as flow'rs do to the Sun.

Give him thy first thoughts then; so shalt thou keep Him company all day, and in him sleep.

Yet never sleep the Sun up. Prayer shou'd
Dawn with the day. There are set, awful hours
'Twixt heaven and us. The Manna was not good
After Sun-rising; far-day fullies flowres.

Rise to prevent the Sun; sleep doth fins glut,
And heaven's gate opens when this world's is shut.

Walk with thy fellow-creatures: note the bush
And whispers amongst them. There's not a Spring,
Or Leafe but hath his Morning-hymn. Each Bush
And Oak doth know I AM. Canst thou not sing?

O leave thy Cares, and follies! go this way;
And thou art sure to prosper all the day.

Serve God before the world; let him not go,
Until thou hast a blessing; then resigne
The whole unto him; and remember who
Prevail'd by wrestling ere the Sun did shine.

Poure Oyle upon the stones; weep for thy sin;
Then journey on, and have an eie to heav'n.

Mornings are Mysteries; the first world's Youth,
Man's Resurrection, and the future's Bud
Shrowd in their births: The Crown of life, light, truth
Is stil'd their starre, the stone, and bidden food.

Three blessings wait upon them, two of which Should move; They make us holy, happy, rich.

When the world's up, and ev'ry swarm abroad,
Keep thou thy temper; mix not with each Clay;
Dispatch necessities; life hath a load

Which must be carri'd on, and safely may.
Yet keep those cares without thee, let the heart
Be God's alone, and choose the better part.

Through all thy Actions, Counsels, and Discourse,
Let Mildness and Religion guide thee out;
If truth be thine, what needs a brutish force?
But what's not good and just ne'er go about.

Wrong not thy Conscience for a rotten stick;
That gain is dreadful, which makes spirits sick.

To God, thy countrie, and thy friend be true;
If Priest and People change, keep thou thy ground.
Who sells Religion, is a Judas Jew;
And, oaths once broke, the soul cannot be found.

The perjurer's a devil let loose: what can
Tie up his hands, that dares mock God and man?

Seek not the same steps with the Crowd; stick thou
To thy sure trot; a Constant, humble mind
Is both his own Joy, and his Maker's too;
Let folly dust it on, or lag behind.

A sweet self-privacy in a right soul
Out-runs the Earth, and lines the utmost pole.

To all that seek thee bear an open heart;
Make not thy breast a Labyrinth or Trap;
If tryals come, this will make good thy part,
For honesty is safe, come what can hap;
It is the good man's feast, the prince of flowres,
Which thrives in storms, and smells best after showres.

Seal not thy Eyes up from the poor, but give Proportion to their Merits, and thy Purse;

Thou may'st in Rags a mighty Prince relieve,
Who, when thy fins call for't, can fence a Curse.

Thou shalt not lose one mite. Though waters stray,
The Bread we cast returns in fraughts one day.

Spend not an hour so as to weep another,
For tears are not thine own ; If thou giv'st words,
Dash not with them thy friend, nor Heav'n ; O smother

A viperous thought ; some Syllables are Swords.

Unbitted tongues are in their penance double ;
They shame their owners, and their bearers trouble.

Injure not modest blood, while spirits rise
In judgement against Lewdness ; that's base wit,
That voyds but filth and stench. Hast thou no prize
But sickness or Infection ? stifle it.

Who makes his jest of sins, must be at least
If not a very devill, worse than Beast.

Yet fly no friend, if he be such indeed ;
But meet to quench his Longings, and thy Thirst ;
Allow your Joyes Religion ; That done, speed,
And bring the same man back, thou wert at first.

Who so returns not, cannot pray aright,
But shuts his door, and leaves God out all night.

To heighten thy Devotions, and keep low
All mutinous thoughts, what busines e'r thou hast,
Observe God in his works ; here fountains flow,
Birds sing, Beasts feed, Fish leap, and th' Earth
stands fast ;

Vast Circling Azure, giddy Clouds, days, nights.

When Seasons change, then lay before thine Eys
 His wondrous Method ; mark the various Scenes
 In heav'n ; Hail, Thunder, Rain-bows, Snow, and Ice,
Calmes, Tempests, Light, and darknes by his means ;
 Thou canst not misse his Praise ; Each tree, herb,
flowre
 Are shadows of his wisedome, and his Pow'r.

To meales when thou doest come, give him the praise
 Whose Arm supply'd thee ; Take what may suffice,
 And then be thankful ; O admire His ways
 Who fills the world's unempty'd granaries !
 A thankless feeder is a Theif, his feast
 A very Robbery, and himself no guest.

High-noon thus past, thy time decays ; provide
 Thee other thoughts ; Away with friends and mirth ;
 The Sun now stoops, and hastes his beams to hide
 Under the dark and melancholy Earth.
 All but preludes thy End. Thou art the man
 Whose Rise, hight, and Descent is but a span.

Yet, set as he doth, and 'tis well. Have all
 Thy Beams home with thee : trim thy Lamp, buy Oyl,
 And then set forth ; who is thus drest, The Fall
 Furthers his glory, and gives death the foyle.
 Man is a Summer's day ; whose youth and fire
 Cool to a glorious Evening, and Expire.

When night comes, list thy deeds ; make plain the way
 'Twixt heaven and thee ; block it not with delays ;
 But perfect all before thou sleep'st ; Then say
Ther's one Sun more strung on my Bead of days.
 What's good score up for Joy ; the bad well scann'd
 Wash off with tears, and get thy Master's hand.

Thy Accounts thus made, spend in the grave one houre
 Before thy time ; Be not a stranger there,
 Where thou may'st sleep whole ages ; Life's poor flow'r
 Lasts not a night sometimes. Bad spirits fear
 This Conversation ; But the good man lyes
 Intombed many days before he dyes.

Being laid, and drest for sleep, Close not thy Eyes
 Up with thy Curtains ; Give thy soul the wing
 In some good thoughts ; So when the day shall rise,
 And thou unrak'st thy fire, those sparks will bring
 New flames ; Besides where these lodge vain beats mourn
 And die ; that Busb, where God is, shall not burn.

When thy Nap's over, stir thy fire, unrake
 In that dead age ; one beam i'th' dark outvies
 Two in the day ; Then from the Damps and Ake
 Of night shut up thy leaves ; be Chaste ; God prys
 Through thickest nights ; Though then the Sun be far,
 Do thou the works of Day, and rise a Star.

Briefly, Doe as thou would'st be done unto,
Love God, and love thy Neighbour ; Watch, and Pray.
 These are the Words, and Works of life ; This do,
 And live ; who doth not thus, hath lost Heav'n's way.
 O lose it not ! look up, wilt Change those Lights
 For Chains of Darknes and Eternal Nights ?

Corruption.

ure, It was so. Man in those early days
Was not all stone and Earth ;
He shin'd a little, and by those weak Rays,
Had some glimpse of his birth.

He saw Heaven o'er his head, and knew from whence
He came condemned hither,

And, as first Love draws strongest, so from hence
His mind sure progress'd thither.

Things here were strange unto him : Sweet and till,
All was a thorn or weed ;

Nor did those last, but, like himself, dyed still
As soon as they did Seed ;

They seem'd to quarrel with him ; for that Act,
That fell'd him, foyl'd them all ;

He drew the Curse upon the world, and Crackt
The whole frame with his fall.

This made him long for home, as loath to stay
With murmurers and foes ;

He sigh'd for Eden, and would often say
Ah ! what bright days were those !

Nor was Heav'n cold unto him ; for each day
The vally, or the Mountain

Afforded visits, and still Paradise lay

In some green shade or fountain.

Angels lay Leiger here ; Each Bush, and Cell,

Each Oke and high-way knew them ;

Walk but the fields, or sit down at some well,

And he was sure to view them.

Almighty Love ! where art thou now ? mad man

Sits down, and freezeth on,
 He raves, and swears to stir nor fire nor fan,
 But bids the thread be spun.
 I see, thy Curtains are Close-drawn ; Thy bow
 Looks dim too in the Cloud ;
 Sin triumphs still, and man is sunk below
 The Center, and his shroud.
 All's in deep sleep, and night ; Thick darkness lyes
 And hatcheth o'er thy people—
 But hark ! what trumpet's that, what angel cries
 Arise ! Thrust in thy sickle !

H. Scriptures.

Elcome, dear book, foul's Joy and food !
 The feast
 Of Spirits ; Heav'n extracted lyes in thee.
 Thou art life's Charter, The Dove's spotless nest
 Where souls are hatch'd unto Eternitie.

In thee the hidden stone, the Manna lies ;
 Thou art the great Elixir rare and Choice ;
 The Key that opens to all Mysteries,
 The Word in Characters, God in the Voice.

O that I had deep Cut in my hard heart
 Each line in thee ! Then would I plead in groans
 Of my Lord's penning, and by sweetest Art
 Return upon himself the Law, and Stones.
 Read here, my faults are thine. This Book, and I
 Will tell thee so ; Sweet Saviour thou didst dye !

Unprofitableness.

Ow rich, O Lord, how fresh thy visits are !

'Twas but just now my bleak leaves hopeless hung

Sully'd with dust and mud ;

Each snarling blast shot through me, and did shear
Their Youth and beauty ; Cold showres nipt, and wrung

Their spiciness and bloud.

But since thou didst in one sweet glance survey
Their sad decays, I flourish, and once more

Breathe all perfumes and spice ;

I smell a dew like Myrrh, and all the day

Wear in my bosome a full Sun ; such store

Hath one beame from thy Eyes.

But, ah, my God ! what fruit hast thou of this ?

What one poor leaf did ever I let fall

To wait upon thy wreath ?

Thus thou all day a thankless weed dost dress,

And when th' hast done, a stench or fog is all

The odour I bequeath.

Christs Nativity.

Wake, glad heart ! get up, and Sing !

It is the Birth-day of thy King.

Awake ! awake !

The Sun doth shake

Light from his locks, and, all the way
Breathing Perfumes, doth spice the day.

2.

Awake, awake! heark how th' wood rings,
Winds whisper, and the busie springs

A Concert make;

Awake! awake!

Man is their high-priest, and should rise
To offer up the sacrifice.

3.

I would I were some Bird, or star,
Flutt'ring in woods, or lifted far

Above this Inne

And Rode of sin!

Then either Star or Bird should be
Shining or fingering still to thee.

I would I had in my best part
Fit Roomes for thee! or that my heart

Were so clean as

Thy manger was!

But I am all filth, and obscene;

Yet, if thou wilt, thou canst make clean.

5.

Sweet Jesu! will then; Let no more
This Leper haunt and soyl thy door!

Cure him, Ease him,

O release him!

And let once more, by mystick birth,
The Lord of life be born in Earth.

II.

HOW kind is heav'n to man! If here
 One sinner doth amend,
 Strait there is Joy, and ev'ry sphere
 In musick doth Contend.
 And shall we then no voices lift?
 Are mercy and salvation
 Not worth our thanks? Is life a gift
 Of no more acceptation?
 Shall he that did come down from thence,
 And here for us was slain,
 Shall he be now cast off? no sense
 Of all his woes remain?
 Can neither Love nor suff'rings bind?
 Are we all stone and Earth?
 Neither his bloody passions mind,
 Nor one day bless'd his birth?
 Alas, my God! Thy birth now here
 Must not be numbred in the year.*

The Check.

 Eace, peace! I blush to hear thee; when thou art
 A dusty story,
 A speechless heap, and in the midst my heart

* The Puritans abolished the celebration of Christmas.

In the same livery drest
 Lyes tame as all the rest ;
 When six years thence digg'd up, some youthfull Eie
 Seeks there for Symmetry,
 But finding none, shall leave thee to the wind,
 Or the next foot to Crush,
 Scatt'ring thy kind
 And humble dust,—tell then, dear flesh,
 Where is thy glory ?

As he, that in the midst of day Expects
 The hideous night,
 Sleeps not, but shaking off sloth and neglects,
 Works with the Sun, and sets
 Paying the day its debts ;
 That for Repose and darkness bound, he might Rest from the fears i'th' night ;
 So should we too. All things teach us to die,
 And point us out the way ;
 While we passe by,
 And mind it not ; play not away
 Thy glimpse of light.

3.

View thy fore-runners. Creatures, giv'n to be Thy youth's Companions,
 Take their leave, and die ; Birds, beasts, each tree
 All that have growth or breath
 Have one large language, Death !
 O then play not ! but strive to Him, who Can Make these sad shades pure Sun,
 Turning their mists to beams, their damps to day ;

Whose pow'r doth so excell
 As to make Clay
 A spirit, and true glory dwell
 In dust and stones.

Heark, how he doth Invite thee ! with what voice
 Of Love and sorrow
 He begs and Calls ! O that in these thy days
 Thou knew'st but thy own good !
 Shall not the Cry of blood,
 Of God's own blood awake thee ? He bids beware
 Of drunknes, surfeits, Care ;
 But thou sleep'st on ; where's now thy protestation,
 Thy Lines, thy Love ? Away !
 Redeem the day ;
 The day that gives no observation
 Perhaps to morrow.

Disorder and frailty.

When first thou didst even from the grave
 And womb of darkness becken out
 My brutish soul, and to thy slave
 Becam'st thy self both guide and Scout ;
 Even from that hour
 Thou got'st my heart ; And though here tost
 By winds, and bit with frost,
 I pine and shrink,
 Breaking the link
 'Twixt thee and me ; And oftimes creep
 Into th' old silence, and dead sleep,

Quitting thy way
 All the long day ;
 Yet, fure, my God ! I love thee most.
Alas, thy love !

2.

I threaten heaven, and from my Cell
 Of Clay and frailty break and bud,
 Touch'd by thy fire and breath ; Thy bloud
 Too is my Dew, and springing well.

But while I grow
 And stretch to thee, ayming at all
 Thy stars and spangled hall,
 Each fly doth taste,
 Poyson, and blast
 My yielding leaves ; sometimes a shower
 Beats them quite off ; and in an hour
 Not one poor shoot,
 But the bare root
 Hid under ground survives the fall.
Alas, frail weed !

3.

Thus like some sleeping Exhalation,
 Which, wak'd by heat and beams, makes up
 Unto that Comforter, the Sun,
 And soars, and shines, but e'er we sup
 And walk two steps,
 Cool'd by the damps of night descends,
 And, whence it sprung, there ends,
 Doth my weak fire
 Pine, and retire ;
 And, after all my hight of flames,
 In sickly Expirations tames,

Leaving me dead
 On my first bed,
 Untill thy Sun again ascends.
Poor, falling Star!

4.

O, yes! but give wings to my fire;
 And hatch my soul, untill it fly
 Up where thou art, amongst thy tire
 Of Stars, above Infirmary;
 Let not perverse,
 And foolish thoughts adde to my Bill
 Of forward Sins, and Kill
 That seed, which thou
 In me didst sow;
 But dresse, and water with thy grace
 Together with the seed, the place;
 And, for his sake
 Who died to stake
 His life for mine, tune to thy will
 My heart, my verse.

Hosea Cap. 6. ver. 4.

O Ephraim what shall I do unto thee? O Judah how shall I intreat thee? for thy goodness is as a morning Cloud, and as the early Dew it goeth away.

Idle Verse.

O, go, quaint folies, sugred sin,
 Shadow no more my door!
 I will no longer Cobwebs spin;
 I'm too much on the score.

For since amidst my youth and night
 My great preserver smiles,
 Wee'l make a Match, my only light
 And Joyn against their wiles.

Blind, desp'rate fits, that study how
 To dresse and trim our shame,
 That gild rank poyson, and allow
 Vice in a fairer name ;

The Purles of youthfull bloud and bowles,
 Lust in the Robes of Love,
 The idle task of feav'rish souls
 Sick with a scarf or glove ;

Let it suffice my warmer days
 Simper'd and shin'd on you ;
 Twist not my Cypresse with your Bays
 Or Roses with my Yewgh.

Go, go, seek out some greener thing ;
 It snows and freezeth here ;
 Let Nightingales attend the spring ;
 Winter is all my year,

Son-dayes.

Right shadows of true Rest! some shoots of blisse ;
 Heaven once a week ;
 The next world's gladness prepossess in this ;
 A day to seek ;

Eternity in time ; the steps by which
We Climb above all ages ; Lamps that light
Man through his heap of dark days ; and the rich,
And full redemption of the whole week's flight !

The Pulleys unto headlong man ; time's bower ;
The narrow way ;
Transplanted Paradise ; God's walking houre ;
The Cool o'th' day !

The Creature's Jubile; God's parle with duft; Heaven here; Man on thofe hills of Myrrh and
flowres;

Angels descending ; the Returns of Trust ;
A Gleam of Glory after six-days-showres !

3.

The Church's love-feasts; Time's Prerogative,
And Interest
Deducted from the whole; The Combs, and hive,
And home of rest.

The milky way Chalkt out with Suns ; a Clue,
That guides through erring hours ; and in full story
A taste of Heav'n on earth ; the pledge and Cue
Of a full feast ; and the Out-Courts of glory.

Repentance.

Lord, since thou didst in this vile Clay
That sacred Ray,
Thy Spirit, plant, quickning the whole
With that one grain's Infused wealth,

My forward flesh crept on, and subtly stole
Both growth and power ; Checking the health
And heat of thine : That little gate
And narrow way, by which to thee
The Passage is, He term'd a grate
And Entrance to Captivitie ;
Thy laws but nets, where some small birds,
And those but feldome too, were caught,
Thy Promises but empty words
Which none but Children heard, or taught.
This I believed : And though a friend
Came oft from far, and whisper'd, No ;
Yet, that not forting to my end,
I wholly listen'd to my foe.
Wherefore, pierc'd through with grief, my sad
Seduced soul sighs up to thee ;
To thee, who with true light art Clad,
And see'st all things just as they be.
Look from thy throne upon this Roll
Of heavy sins, my high transgressions,
Which I Confesse with all my soul ;
My God, Accept of my Confession !
It was last day,
Touch'd with the guilt of my own way,
I fate alone, and taking up
The bitter Cup,
Through all thy fair and various store,
Sought out what might outvie my score.
The blades of grasse thy Creatures feeding ;
The trees, their leafs ; the flowres, their Seeding ;
The Dust, of which I am a part ;
The Stones much softer than my heart ;
The drops of rain, the sighs of wind,
The Stars, to which I am stark blind ;

The Dew thy herbs drink up by night,
The beams they warm them at i'th' light ;
All that have signature or life
I summon'd to decide this strife ;
And lest I should lack for Arrears,
A spring ran by, I told her tears ;
But when these came unto the scale,
My sins alone outweigh'd them all.

O my dear God ! my life, my love !
Most blessed lamb ! and mildest dove !
Forgive your penitent Offender,
And no more his sins remember ;
Scatter these shades of death, and give
Light to my soul, that it may live ;
Cut me not off for my transgressions,
Wilful rebellions, and suppressions ;
But give them in those streams a part
Whose spring is in my Saviour's heart.
Lord, I confesse the heynous score,
And pray, I may do so no more ;
Though then all finners I exceed ;
O think on this ; Thy Son did bleed !
O call to mind his wounds, his woes,
His Agony, and bloudie throes ;
Then look on all that thou hast made,
And mark how they do fail and fade ;
The heavens themselves, though fair and bright,
Are dark and unclean in thy sight ;
How then, with thee, Can man be holy,
Who doest thine Angels charge with folly ?
O what am I, that I should breed
Figs on a thorne, flowres on a weed ?
I am the gourd of sin and sorrow,
Growing o'er night, and gone to morrow.

In all this Round of life and death
 Nothing's more vile than is my breath;
 Profanenes on my tongue doth rest,
 Defects and darknes in my brest;
 Pollutions all my body wed,
 And even my soul to thee is dead;
 Only in him, on whom I feast,
 Both soul and body are well drest;
 His pure perfection quits all score,
 And fills the Boxes of his poor;
 He is the Center of long life and light;
 I am but finite, He is Infinite.
 O let thy Justice then in him Confine;
 And through his merits make thy mercy mine!

The Burial of an Infant.

 Left Infant Bud, whose Blossome-life
 Did only look about, and fall,
 Wearyed out in a harmless strife
 Of tears, and milk, the food of all!

Sweetly didst thou expire: Thy soul
 Flew home unstain'd by his new kin;
 For ere thou knew'st how to be foul,
 Death wean'd thee from the world and fin.

Softly rest all thy Virgin-Crums!
Lapt in the sweets of thy young breath,
 Expecting till thy Saviour Comes
 To dresse them, and unswadle death.

Faith.

Bright and blest beame ! whose strong projection,

Equall to all,

Reacheth as well things of dejection

As th' high and tall ;

How hath my God by raying thee

Inlarg'd his spouſe,

And of a private familie

Made open houſe !

All may be now Co-heirs ; no noiſe

Of Bond or Free

Can Interdict us from thoſe Joys

That wait on thee.

The Law and Ceremonies made

A glorious night,

Where Stars, and Clouds, both light, and ſhade

Had equal right ;

But, as in nature, when the day

Breaks, night adjourns,

Stars ſhut up ſhop, miſts pack away,

And the Moon mourns ;

So when the Sun of righteouſneſs

Did once appear,

That Scene was chang'd, and a new dreſſe

Left for us here ;

Veiles became uſeles, Altars fell,

Fires ſmoking die ;

And all that ſacred pomp, and ſhell

Of things did flie.

Then did He shine forth, whose sad fall,
 And bitter fights
 Were figur'd in those mystical,
 And Cloudie Rites ;
 And as i'th' natural Sun, these three,
Light, motion, beat,
 So are now Faith, Hope, Charity
 Through him Compleat ;
 Faith spans up blisse ; what sin and death
 Put us quite from,
 Left we should run for't out of breath,
 Faith brings us home ;
 So that I need no more, but say
I do believe,
 And my most loving Lord straitway
 Doth answer, Live !

The Dawning.

H ! what time wilt thou come ? when shall that crie

The Bridegroome's Comming! fill the sky ?

Shall it in the Evening run
 When our words and works are done ?
 Or will thy all-surprizing light
 Break at midnight,
 When either sleep, or some dark pleasure
 Possesseth mad man without measure ?
 Or shall these early, fragrant hours
 Unlock thy bowres ?
 And with their blush of light descry

Thy locks crown'd with eternitie?
Indeed, it is the only time
That with thy glory doth best chime;
All now are stirring, ev'ry field
Full hymns doth yield;
The whole Creation shakes off night,
And for thy shadow looks the light;
Stars now vanish without number,
Sleepie Planets fet and slumber,
The purfie Clouds disband and scatter,
All expect some sudden matter;
Not one beam triumphs, but from far
That morning-star.

O at what time foever thou,
Unknown to us, the heavens wilt bow,
And, with thy Angels in the Van,
Descend to judge poor careless man,
Grant, I may not like puddle lie
In a Corrupt securitie,
Where, if a traveller water crave,
He finds it dead, and in a grave;
But as this restless, vocal Spring
All day and night doth run, and sing,
And though here born, yet is acquainted
Elsewhere, and flowing keeps untainted;
So let me all my busie age
In thy free services ingage;
And though (while here) of force I must
Have Commerce somtimes with poor dust,
And in my flesh, though vile and low,
As this doth in her Channel, flow,
Yet let my Course, my aym, my Love,
And chief acquaintance be above;

So when that day and hour shall come,
 In which thy self will be the Sun,
 Thou'lt find me drest and on my way,
 Watching the Break of thy great day.

Admission.

 Now shrill are silent tears? when fingsot head
 And all my Bowels turn'd
 To brasse and iron, when my stock lay
 dead,
 And all my powers mourn'd;
 Then did these drops, (for Marble sweats,
 And Rocks have tears,)
 As rain here at our windows beats,
 Chide in thine Ears;

2.

No quiet couldst thou have: nor didst thou wink,
 And let thy Begger lie,
 But e'r my eies could overflow their brink
 Didst to each drop reply;
 Bowels of Love! at what low rate,
 And slight a price
 Dost thou relieve us at thy gate,
 And still our Cries!

3.

Wee are thy Infants, and suck thee; If thou
 But hide, or turn thy face,
 Because where thou art yet we cannot go,
 We send tears to the place,

These find thee out, and though our fins
 Drove thee away ;
 Yet with thy love that absence wins
 Us double pay.

4.

O give me then a thankful heart ! a heart
 After thy own, not mine ;
 So after thine, that all and ev'ry part
 Of mine may wait on thine ;
 O hear ! yet not my tears alone,
 Hear now a flood,
 A flood that drowns both tears and grones,
 My Saviour's blood.

Praise.

King of Comforts ! King of life !
 Thou hast cheer'd me ;
 And when fears and doubts were rife,
 Thou hast clear'd me !

Not a nook in all my Breast
 But thou fill'st it,
 Not a thought, that breaks my rest,
 But thou kill'st it ;

Wherefore with my utmost strength
 I will praise thee,
 And as thou giv'st line and length
 I will raise thee ;

Day, and night, not once a day
 I will bless thee,

And my foul in new array
I will dresse thee ;

Not one minute in the year
But I'll mind thee,
As my seal and bracelet here
I will bind thee ;

In thy word, as if in heaven
I will rest me,
And thy promise 'till made even
There shall feast me.

Then thy sayings all my life
There shall please me,
And thy bloody wounds, and strife
They will ease me ;

With thy grones my daily breath
I will measure,
And my life hid in thy death
I will treasure.

Though then thou art
Past thought of heart
All perfect fulness,
And canst no whit
Accesse admit
From dust and dulness ;

Yet to thy name,
As not the same
With thy bright Essence,
Our foul Clay hands

At thy Commands
Bring praise and Incense ;

If then, dread Lord,
When to thy board
Thy wretch comes begging,
He hath a flowre
Or, to his pow'r,
Some such poor Off'ring ;

When thou hast made
Thy begger glad,
And fill'd his bosome,
Let him, though poor,
Strow at thy door
That one poor Blossome.

Dressing.

Thou that lovest a pure and whitend soul !
That feedst among the Lillies, 'till the day
Break, and the shadows flee ! touch with one Coal

My frozen heart ! and with thy secret key

Open my desolate rooms ; my gloomie Brest
With thy cleer fire refine, burning to dust
These dark Confusions that within me nest,
And soyl thy Temple with a sinful rust.

Thou holy, harmles, undefil'd High-priest !
The perfect, full oblation for all sin,
Whose glorious conquest nothing can resist,
But even in babes doest triumph still and win ;

Give to thy wretched one
Thy mysticall Communion,
That, absent, he may see,
Live, die, and rise with thee ;
Let him so follow here, that in the end
He may take thee, as thou dost him intend.

Give him thy private seal,
Earnest, and sign ! Thy gifts so deal
That these forerunners here
May make the future cleer !
Whatever thou dost bid let faith make good,
Bread for thy body, and Wine for thy blood.

Give him, with pitty, love,
Two flowres that grew with thee above ;
Love that shall not admit
Anger for one short fit ;
And pitty of such a divine extent,
That may thy members, more than mine, resent.

Give me, my God ! thy grace,
The beams, and brightness of thy face ;
That never like a beast
I take thy sacred feast,
Or the dread mysteries of thy blest bloud
Use, with like Custome, as my Kitchen food.

Some fit to thee, and eat
Thy body as their Common meat ;
O let not me do so !
Poor dust should ly still low ;
Then kneel, my soul and body, kneel and bow ;
If Saints and Angels fall down, much more thou.

Easter-day.

 Hou, whose sad heart and weeping head
 lyes low,
 Whose Cloudy brest cold damps invade,
 Who never feel't the Sun, nor smooth't thy brow,
 But sitt'ft oppress'd in the shade,
 Awake! awake!

And in his Resurrection partake,
 Who on this day, that thou might'ft rise as he,
 Rose up, and cancell'd two deaths due to thee.

Awake! awake! and, like the Sun, disperse
 All mists that would usurp this day;
 Where are thy Palmes, thy branches, and thy verse?
Hosanna! heark! why doest thou stay?
 Arise! arise!

And with his healing blood anoint thine Eyes,
 Thy inward Eyes; his blood will cure thy mind,
 Whose spittle only could restore the blind.

Easter Hymn.

 Eath, and darkness get you packing,
 Nothing now to man is lacking;
 All your triumphs now are ended,
 And what Adam marr'd is mended;
 Graves are beds now for the weary,
 Death a nap, to wake more merry;

Youth now, full of pious duty,
 Seeks in thee for perfect beauty ;
 The weak and aged tir'd with length
 Of daies from thee look for new strength ;
 And Infants with thy pangs Contest
 As pleasant, as if with the brest.

Then, unto Him, who thus hath thrown
 Even to Contempt thy kingdome down,
 And by His blood did us advance
 Unto His own Inheritance,
 To Him be glory, power, praise,
 From this, unto the last of daies !

The Holy Communion.

Elcome sweet, sacred feast ! O welcome life !
 Dead I was, and deep in trouble ;
 But grace and blessings came with thee fo
 rife,
 That they have quicken'd even drie stubble.
 Thus soules their bodies animate,
 And thus at first when things were rude,
 Dark, void, and Crude,
 They by thy Word their beauty had and date ;
 All were by thee,
 And still must be ;
 Nothing that is, or lives,
 But hath his Quicknings, and reprieves,
 As thy hand opes or shuts ;
 Healings, and Cuts,
 Darknes, and day-light, life, and death

Are but meer leaves turn'd by thy breath.
Spirits without thee die,
And blackness fits
On the divinest wits,
As on the Sun Ecclipses lie.
But that great darkness at thy death,
When the veyl broke with thy last breath,
Did make us see
The way to thee ;
And now by these sure, sacred ties,
After thy blood
Our sov'rain good,
Had clear'd our eies,
And given us sight ;
Thou dost unto thy self betroth
Our souls and bodies both
In everlasting light.

Was't not enough that thou hadst paid the price,
And given us eies
When we had none, but thou must also take
Us by the hand,
And keep us still awake,
When we would sleep,
Or from thee creep,
Who without thee cannot stand ?

Was't not enough to lose thy breath
And blood by an accursed death,
But thou must also leave
To us, that did bereave
Thee of them both, these seals, the means
That should both cleanse
And keep us so,

Who wrought thy wo?
O rose of Sharon! O the Lilly
Of the valley!

How art thou now, thy flock to keep,
Become both food, and Shepherd to thy sheep!

Pfalm 121.

P to those bright and gladsome hills,
Whence flowes my weal and mirth,
I look, and sigh for Him, who fills
Unseen both heaven and earth.

He is alone my help and hope,
That I shall not be moved;
His watchful Eye is ever ope,
And guardeth His beloved;

The glorious God is my sole stay,
He is my Sun and shade;
The cold by night, the heat by day,
Neither shall me invade.

He keeps me from the spite of foes;
Doth all their plots controul;
And is a shield, not reckoning those,
Unto my very soul.

Whether abroad, amidst the Crowd,
Or else within my door,
He is my Pillar and my Cloud,
Now and for evermore.

Affliction.

 Eace, peace ; It is not so. Thou dost miscall
 Thy Physick ; Pills that change
 Thy sick Accessions into settled health ;
 This is the great Elixir that turns gall
 To wine and sweetness, Poverty to wealth,
 And brings man home, when he doth range.
 Did not he, who ordain'd the day,
 Ordain night too ?
 And in the greater world display
 What in the lesser He would do ?
 All flesh is Clay, thou know'st ; and but that God
 Doth use his rod,
 And by a fruitfull Change of frosts and showres
 Cherish and bind thy pow'rs,
 Thou wouldst to weeds and thistles quite disperse,
 And be more wild than is thy verse.
 Sickness is wholesome, Crosses are but curbs
 To check the mule, unruly man ;
 They are heaven's husbandry, the famous fan,
 Purging the floor which Chaff disturbs.
 Were all the year one constant Sun-shine, wee
 Should have no flowres ;
 All would be drought and leanness ; not a tree
 Would make us bowres.
 Beauty consists in colours ; and that's best
 Which is not fixt, but flies and flowes.
 The settled Red is dull, and whites that rest
 Something of sickness would disclose.
 Vicissitude plaies all the game ;

Nothing that stirrs,
 Or hath a name,
 But waits upon this wheel;
 Kingdomes too have their Physick, and for steel
 Exchange their peace and furs.
 Thus doth God Key disorder'd man, which none else can,
 Tuning his brest to rise or fall;
 And by a sacred, needfull art
 Like strings, stretch ev'ry part
 Making the whole most Musically.

The Tempest.

Ow is man parcell'd out? how every hour
 Shews him himself, or something he should see!
 This late, long heat may his Instruction be;
 And tempests have more in them than a showr.

*When nature on her bosome saw
 Her Infants die,
 And all her flowres wither'd to straw,
 Her breasts grown dry;
 She made the Earth, their nurse & tomb,
 Sigh to the sky,
 'Till to those sighes fetch'd from her womb
 Rain did reply;
 So in the midst of all her fears
 And faint requests,
 Her Earnest sighes procur'd her tears
 And fill'd her breasts.*

O that man could do so ! that he would hear
The world read to him ! all the vast expence
In the Creation shed, and sav'd to fence
Makes up but lectures for his eie and ear.

Sure Mighty Love, foreseeing the descent
Of this poor Creature, by a gracious art
Hid in these low things snares to gain his heart,
And layd surprizes in each Element.

All things here shew him heaven ; waters that fall,
Chide and fly up ; Mists of corruptest foam
Quit their first beds & mount ; trees, herbs, flowres, all
Strive upwards still, and point him the way home.

How do they cast off grossness ? only Earth,
And Man like Iffachar in lodes delight,
Water's refin'd to Motion, Aire to Light,
Fire to all * three, but man hath no such mirth.

Plants in the root with Earth do most Comply,
Their Leafs with water and humiditie,
The Flowres to air draw neer and subtiltie,
And seeds a kindred fire have with the sky.

All have their keyes and set ascents ; but man
Though he knows these, and hath more of his own,
Sleeps at the ladder's foot ; alas ! what can
These new discoveries do, except they drown ?

Thus, groveling in the shade and darkness, he Sinks to a dead oblivion ; and though all

* Light, Motion, heat.

He fees, like Pyramids, shoot from this ball
And less'ning still grow up invisibly,

Yet hugs he still his durt; The stuffe he wears,
And painted trimming takes down both his eies;
Heaven hath less beauty than the dust he spies,
And money better musick than the Spheres.

Life's but a blast; he knows it; what? shall straw,
And bul-rush-fetters temper his short hour?
Must he nor sip nor sing? grows ne'r a flower
To crown his temples? shall dreams be his law?

O foolish man! how hast thou lost thy fight?
How is it that the Sun to thee alone
Is grown thick darkness, and thy bread a stone?
Hath flesh no softness now? mid-day no light?

Lord! thou didst put a soul here. If I must Be broke again, for flints will give no fire
Without a steel, O let thy power cleer
Thy gift once more, and grind this flint to dust!

Retirement.

Ho on yon throne of Azure sits,
Keeping close house
Above the morning-starre,
Whose meaner showes,
And outward utensils these glories are,
That shine and share
Part of his mansion; He one day,
When I went quite astray,

Out of meer love,
By his mild Dove,
Did shew me home, and put me in the way.

2.

Let it suffice at length thy fits
And lusts, said he,
Have had their wish, and way ;
Presse not to be
Still thy own foe, and mine ; for to this day
I did delay,
And would not see, but chose to wink ;
Nay, at the very brink
And edge of all,
When thou wouldst fall,
My love-twist held thee up, my unseen link.

3.

I know thee well ; for I have fram'd,
And hate thee not ;
Thy spirit too is mine ;
I know thy lot,
Extent, and end, for my hands drew the line
Assigned thine ;
If then thou would'st unto my seat,
'Tis not th' applause and feat
Of dust and clay
Leads to that way,
But from those follies a resolv'd Retreat.

4.

Now here below where yet untam'd
Thou dost thus rove,
I have a house as well
As there above ;

In it my Name and honour both do dwell ;
 And shall untill
 I make all new ; there nothing gay
 In perfumes or Array,
 Dust lies with dust,
 And hath but just
 The same Respect and room with ev'ry clay.

5.

A faithfull school, where thou maist see,
 In Heraldrie
 Of stones and speechless Earth,
 Thy true descent ;
 Where dead men preach, who can turn feasts and mirth
 To funerals and Lent.
 There dust, that out of doors might fill
 Thy eies, and blind thee still,
 Is fast asleep.
 Up then, and keep
 Within those doors, my doors. Dost hear ? I will.

Love, and Discipline.

Ince in a land not barren still,
 Because thou dost thy grace distill,
 My lot is faln, Blest be thy will !

And since these biting frosts but kill
 Some tares in me which choke or spill
 That seed thou sow'ft, Blest be thy skill !

Blest be thy Dew, and blest thy frost,
 And happy I to be so crost,
 And cur'd by Crosses at thy cost.

The Dew doth Cheer what is distrest,
 The frosts ill weeds nip and molest,
 In both thou work'st unto the best.

Thus while thy sev'ral mercies plot,
 And work on me now cold now hot,
 The work goes on, and slacketh not;

For as thy hand the weather steers,
 So thrive I best 'twixt joyes and tears,
 And all the year have some grean Ears.

The Pilgrimage.

S travellours when the twilight's come,
 And in the sky the stars appear,
 The past daies accidents do summe
 With, Thus wee saw there, and thus here.

Then Jacob-like lodge in a place,
 A place, and no more, is set down,
 Where till the day restore the race
 They rest and dream homes of their own.

So for this night I linger here,
 And full of tossings to and fro,
 Expect still when thou wilt appear,
 That I may get me up, and go.

How did poor flesh, which after thou didst weare,
Then faint and fear!
Thy Chosen flock, like leaves in a high wind,
Whisper'd obedience, and their heads Inclined.

2.

But now since we to Sion came,
And through thy bloud thy glory see,
With filial Confidence we touch ev'n thee;
And where the other mount, all clad in flame
And threatning Clouds, would not so much
As 'bide the touch,
We Climb up this, and have too all the way
Thy hand our stay;
Nay, thou tak'st ours, and, which full Comfort brings,
Thy Dove too bears us on her sacred wings.

3.

Yet since man is a very brute,
And after all thy Acts of grace doth kick,
Slighting that health thou gav'st when he was sick,
Be not displeas'd, if I, who have a sute
To thee each houre, beg at thy door
For this one more;
O plant in me thy Gospel, and thy Law,
Both Faith, and Awe;
So swift them in my heart, that ever there
I may as well as Love, find too thy fear!

4.

Let me not spill, but drink thy bloud;
Not break thy fence, and by a black Excess
Force down a Just Curse, when thy hands would bless;
Let me not scatter and despise my food,

Or nail those blessed limbs again
 Which bore my pain:
 So Shall thy mercies flow : for while I fear,
 I know thou'l't bear,
 But should thy mild Injunction nothing move me,
 I would both think and judge I did not love thee.

John Cap. 14. ver. 15.

If ye love me, keep my Commandments.

The World.

Saw Eternity the other night
 Like a great Ring of pure and endless light,
 All calm, as it was bright ;
 And round beneath it, Time in hours,
 days, years,
 Driv'n by the spheres
 Like a vast shadow mov'd, In which the world
 And all her train were hurl'd.
 The doting Lover in his quaintest strain
 Did there Complain ;
 Neer him, his Lute, his fancy, and his flights,
 Wit's four delights ;
 With gloves, and knots the silly snares of pleasure,
 Yet his dear Treasure,
 All scatter'd lay, while he his eyes did pour
 Upon a flower.

2.

The darksome States-man hung with weights and woe,
 Like a thick midnight-fog, mov'd there so slow,
 He did nor stay, nor go ;
 Condemning thoughts like sad Ecclipses fowl

Upon his soul,
And Clouds of crying witnesses without
Pursued him with one shout.
Yet digg'd the Mole, and, lest his ways be found,
Workt under ground,
Where he did Clutch his prey ; but one did see
That policie ;
Churches and altars fed him ; Perjuries
Were gnats and flies ;
It rain'd about him bloud and tears ; but he Drank them as free.

3.

The fearfull miser on a heap of rust
Sate pining all his life there, did scarce trust
His own hands with the dust,
Yet would not place one peece above, but lives
In feare of theeves.
Thoufands there were as frantick as himself,
And hugg'd each one his pelf ;
The down-right Epicure plac'd heav'n in sense,
And scorn'd pretence ;
While others, slipt into a wide Excesse,
Said little lesse ;
The weaker fort flight, triviall wares Inslave,
Who think them brave,
And poor, despised truth sate Counting by
Their victory.

4.

Yet some, who all this while did weep and sing,
And sing and weep, soar'd up into the Ring ;
But most would use no wing.
O fools, said I, thus to prefer dark night

Before true light!
 To live in grotts and caves, and hate the day
 Because it shews the way,
 The way, which from this dead and dark abode
 Leads up to God,
 A way where you might tread the Sun, and be
 More bright than he!
 But as I did their madnes so discusse
 One whisper'd thus,
*This Ring the Bride-groome did for none provide,
 But for his bride.*

John Cap. 2. ver. 16, 17.

All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the Eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

*And the world passeth away, and the lusts thereof;
 but he that doth the will of God abideth for ever.*

The Mutinie.

Early of this same Clay and straw I laid
 Me down to breathe, and casting in my heart
 The after-burthens and griefs yet to come,
 The heavy sum
 So shook my brest, that sick and fore dismai'd,
 My thoughts, like water, which some stone doth start,
 Did quit their troubled Channel, and retire
 Unto the banks, where, storming at those bounds,
 They murmur'd fore; But I, who felt them boyl

And knew their Coyl,
 Turning to him, who made poor sand to tire
 And tame proud waves, If yet these barren grounds
 And thirstie brick must be, said I,
 My taske and Destinie,

2.

Let me so strive and struggle with thy foes,
 (Not thine alone, but mine too,) that when all
 Their Arts and force are built unto the height,
 That Babel-weight
 May prove thy glory, and their shame; so Close
 And knit me to thee, That though in this vale
 Of sin and death I sojourn, yet one Eie
 May look to thee, To thee the finisher
 And Author of my faith; so shew me home,
 That all this foam
 And frothie noise, which up and down doth flie,
 May find no lodging in mine Eie or Eare;
 O seal them up! that these may flie
 Like other tempests by.

3.

Not but I know thou hast a shorter Cut
 To bring me home, than through a wildernes,
 A Sea, or Sands, and Serpents; Yet since thou,
 As thy words show,
 Though in this desert I were wholly shut,
 Canst light and lead me there with such redress
 That no decay shal touch me; O be pleas'd
 To fix my steps; and whatsoever path
 Thy sacred and eternall will decreed
 For thy bruise'd reed,
 O give it full obedience, that so seiz'd
 Of all I have, I may nor move thy wrath

Nor grieve thy Dove, but soft and mild
Both live and die thy Child.

Revel. Cap. 2. ver. 17.

*To him that overcometh wil I give to eate of the hidden Manna; and I will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man
knoweth, saving he that receiveth it.*

The Constellation.

Air, ordered lights, whose motion without noise

Resembles those true Joys,

Whose spring is on that hill, where you
do grow,

And we here taste sometimes below,

With what exact obedience do you move

Now beneath, and now above!

And in your vast progressions overlook

The darkest night, and closest nook!

Some nights I see you in the gladsome East,

Some others near the West,

And when I cannot see, yet do you shine,

And beat about your endles line.

Silence and light and watchfulness with you

Attend and wind the Clue;

No sleep nor sloth assailes you, but poor man

Still either sleeps, or slips his span.

He gropes beneath here, and with restless Care,
First makes, then hugs a snare;
Adores dead dust, sets heart on Corne and grafs,
But seldom doth make heav'n his glafs.

Musick and mirth, if there be musick here,
Take up, and tune his year;
These things are Kin to him, and must be had,
Who kneels, or sighs a life, is mad.

Perhaps some nights he'll watch with you, and peep
When it were best to sleep;
Dares know Effects, and Judge them long before,
When th' herb he treads knows much, much more.

But seeks he your Obedience, Order, Light,
Your calm and wel-train'd flight,
Where, though the glory differ in each star,
Yet is there peace still and no war.

Since plac'd by Him, who calls you by your names,
And fixt there all your flames,
Without Command you never acted ought,
And then you in your courses fought.

But here Commission'd by a black self-will
The sons the father kill,
The Children Chase the mother, and would heal
The wounds they give by crying zeale.

Then Cast her bloud and tears upon thy book,
Where they for fashion look;
And, like that Lamb, which had the Dragon's voice,
Seem mild, but are known by their noise.

Thus by our lusts disorder'd into wars
 Our guides prove wandring stars,
 Which for these mists and black days were reserv'd,
 What time we from our first love swerv'd.

Yet O for his sake who sits now by thee
 All crown'd with victory,
 So guide us through this Darknes, that we may
 Be more and more in love with day!

Settle and fix our hearts, that we may move
 In order, peace, and love;
 And taught obedience by thy whole Creation,
 Become an humble, holy nation!

Give to thy spouse her perfect and pure drefs,
Beauty and holiness;
 And so repair these Rents, that men may see
 And say, Where God is, all agree.

The Shepherds.

weet, harmless lives! on whose holy leisure
 Waits Innocence and pleasure,
 Whose leaders to those pastures and cleer
 springs

Were Patriarchs, Saints, and Kings;
 How happend it that in the dead of night
 You only saw true light,
 While Palestine was fast asleep, and lay
 Without one thought of Day?
 Was it because those first and blessed swains
 Were pilgrims on those plains,

When they receiv'd the promise, for which now
 'Twas there first shown to you?
'Tis true, he loves that Dust whereon they go
 That serve him here below,
And therefore might for memory of those
 His love there first disclose;
But wretched Salem once his love, must now
 No voice nor vision know,
Her stately Piles with all their height and pride
 Now languished and died,
And Bethlem's humble Cott's above them steep,
 While all her Seers slept;
Her Cedar, firr, hew'd stones, and gold were all
 Polluted through their fall,
And those once sacred mansions were now
 Meer emptiness and show.
This made the Angel call at reeds and thatch,
 Yet where the shepherds watch,
And God's own lodging, though he could not lack,
 To be a common Kack;
No costly pride, no soft-cloath'd luxurie,
 In those thin Cels could lie;
Each stirring wind and storm blew through their Cots,
 Which never harbour'd plots;
Only Content and love and humble joys
 Lived there without all noise;
Perhaps some harmless Cares for the next day
 Did in their bosomes play,
As where to lead their sheep, what silent nook,
 What springs or shades to look;
But that was all; And now with gladsome care
 They for the town prepare;
They leave their flock, and in a busie talk
 All towards Bethlem walk

To see their soul's great shepheard, who was come,
 To bring all straglers home ;
 Where now they find him out, and, taught before,
 That Lamb of God adore,
 That Lamb whose daies great Kings and Prophets
 And long'd to see, but miss'd. [wish'd
 The first light they beheld was bright and gay,
 And turn'd their night to day ;
 But to this later light they saw in him,
 Their day was dark and dim.

Misery.

Ord, bind me up, and let me lye
 A Pris'ner to my libertie,
 If such a state at all can be
 As an Impris'ment serving thee ;

The wind, though gather'd in thy fist,
 Yet doth it blow still where it list,
 And yet shouldst thou let go thy hold
 Those gusts might quarrel and grow bold.

As waters here, headlong and loose,
 The lower grounds still chase and choose,
 Where spreading all the way they seek
 And search out every hole and Creek ;
 So my spilt thoughts, winding from thee,
 Take the down-rode to vanitie,
 Where they all stray and strive, which shall
 Find out the first and steepest fall.
 I cheer their flow, giving supply
 To what's already grown too high,
 And having thus perform'd that part

Feed on those vomits of my heart.
I break the fence my own hands made,
Then lay that trespass in the shade;
Some fig-leaves still I do devise,
As if thou hadst nor ears nor Eyes.
Excess of friends, of words, and wine
Take up my day, while thou dost shine
All unregarded, and thy book
Hath not so much as one poor look.
If thou steal in amidst the mirth
And kindly tell me, I am Earth,
I shut thee out, and let that slip,
Such Musick spoils good fellowship.
Thus wretched I and most unkind,
Exclude my dear God from my mind,
Exclude him thence, who of that Cell
Would make a Court, should he there dwell.
He goes, He yields; And troubled sore
His Holy Spirit grieves therefore;
The mighty God, th' eternal King
Doth grieve for Dust, and Dust doth sing.
But I go on, haste to Divest
My self of reason, till oppress'd
And buried in my surfeits I
Prove my own shame and miserie.
Next day I call and cry for thee
Who shouldst not then come neer to me;
But now it is thy servant's pleasure
Thou must and dost give him his measure.
Thou dost, thou com'st, and in a shower
Of healing sweets thy self dost pour
Into my wounds; and now thy grace
(I know it well,) fills all the place;
I sit with thee by this new light,

And for that hour thou'rt my delight ;
 No man can more the world despise,
 Or thy great mercies better prize.
 I School my Eyes, and strictly dwell
 Within the Circle of my Cell ;
 That Calm and silence are my Joys,
 Which to thy peace are but meer noise.
 At length I feel my head to ake,
 My fingers Itch, and burn to take
 Some new Imployment, I begin
 To swell and foame and fret within.

*" The Age, the present times are not
 To snudge in, and embrace a Cot ;
 Action and bloud now get the game,
 Disdain treads on the peaceful name ;
 Who sits at home too bears a load
 Greater than those that gad abroad."*

Thus do I make thy gifts giv'n me
 The only quarrellers with thee ;
 I'd loose those knots thy hands did tie,
 Then would go travel, fight, or die.
 Thousands of wild and waste Infusions
 Like waves beat on my resolutions ;
 As flames about their fuel run,
 And work and wind till all be done,
 So my fierce soul bufiles about,
 And never rests till all be out.
 Thus wilded by a peevish heart,
 Which in thy musick bears no part,
 I storm at thee, calling my peace
 A Lethargy, and meer disease ;
 Nay those bright beams shot from thy eyes
 To calm me in these mutinies,
 I stile meer tempers, which take place

At some fet times, but are thy grace.

Such is man's life, and such is mine,
The worst of men, and yet still thine,
Still thine, thou know'st, and if not so,
Then give me over to my foe.
Yet since as easie 'tis for thee
To make man good as bid him be,
And with one glance, could he that gain,
To look him out of all his pain,
O send me from thy holy hill
So much of strength, as may fulfil
All thy delights whate'er they be,
And sacred Institutes in me!
Open my rockie heart, and fill
It with obedience to thy will;
Then seal it up, that as none see,
So none may enter there but thee.

O hear, my God! hear Him, whose blood
Speaks more and better for my good!
O let my Crie come to thy throne!
My crie not pour'd with tears alone,
(For tears alone are often foul,)
But with the blood of all my soul;
With spirit-sighs, and earnest groans,
Faithful and most repenting moans,
With these I crie, and crying pine,
Till thou both mend, and make me thine.

The Sap.

Ome, sapless Blossom, creep not still on Earth

Forgetting thy first birth!

'Tis not from dust; or if so, why dost thou

Thus call and thirst for dew?
It tends not thither; if it doth, why then
 This growth and stretch for heav'n?
Thy root sucks but diseases; worms there feat,
 And claim it for their meat.
Who plac'd thee here did something then Infuse,
 Which now can tell thee news.
There is beyond the Stars an hill of myrrh,
 From which some drops fall here;
On it the Prince of Salem sits, who deals
 To thee thy secret meals;
There is thy Country, and He is the way,
 And hath withal the key.
Yet liv'd He here sometimes, and bore for thee
 A world of miserie,
For thee, who in the first man's loyns didst fall
 From that hill to this vale;
And had not he so done, it is most true
 Two deaths had been thy due;
But going hence, and knowing well what woes
 Might his friends discompose,
To shew what strange love He had to our good,
 He gave his sacred blood,
By will our sap and Cordial; now in this
 Lies such a heav'n of bliss,
That who but truly tastes it, no decay
 Can touch him any way.
Such secret life and vertue in it lies,
 It will exalt, and rise,
And actuate such spirits as are shed,
 Or ready to be dead;
And bring new too. Get then this sap, and get Good store of it, but let
The vessel where you put it be for sure

To all your pow'r most pure ;
 There is at all times, though shut up, in you
 A powerful, rare dew,
 Which only grief and love extract ; with this
 Be sure, and never miss,
 To wash your vessel well : Then humbly take
 This balm for souls that ake ;
 And one who drank it thus assures that you
 Shal find a Joy so true,
 Such perfect Ease, and such a lively sense
 Of grace against all sins,
 That you'll Confess the Comfort such, as even Brings to, and comes from, Heaven.

Mount of Olives.

When first I saw true beauty, and thy Joys
 Active as light, and calm without all
 noise,
 Shin'd on my soul, I felt through all my powr's
 Such a rich air of sweets, as Evening shows
 Fand by a gentle gale Convey, and breathe
 On some parch'd bank, crown'd with a flowrie wreath ;
 Odors, and Myrrh, and balm in one rich floud
 O'r-ran my heart, and spirited my bloud ;
 My thoughts did swim in Comforts, and mine eie
 Confest, The world did only paint and lie.
 And where before I did no safe Course steer,
 But wander'd under tempests all the year ;
 Went bleak and bare in body as in mind,
 And was blow'n through by every storm and wind,

I am so warm'd now by this glance on me,
 That midst all storms I feel a Ray of thee.
 So have I known some beauteous Paisage rise
 In suddain flowres and arbours to my Eies,
 And in the depth and dead of winter bring
 To my Cold thoughts a lively sence of spring.

Thus fed by thee, who dost all beings nourish,
 My wither'd leaſs again look green and flourish;
 I shine and shelter underneath thy wing,
 Where sick with love I strive thy name to ſing;
 Thy glorious name! which grant I may ſo do,
 That theſe may be thy Praise, and my Joy too!

Man.

Eighing the ſtedfaſtneſs and ſtate
 Of ſome mean things which here below
 reſide,
 Where birds like watchful Clocks the noiſeleſs date

And Intercourſe of times divide,
 Where Bees at night get home and hive, and flowrs,
 Early as well as late,
 Riſe with the Sun, and ſet in the ſame bowrs;

2.

I would, ſaid I, my God would give
 The ſtaidneſs of theſe things to man! for theſe
 To His divine appointments ever cleave,

And no new buſineſs breaks their peace;
 The birds nor ſow nor reap, yet ſup and dine,
 The flowres without clothes live,
 Yet Solomon was never dreſt ſo fine.

3.

Man hath still either toyes or Care ;
 He hath no root, nor to one place is ty'd,
 But ever restless and Irregular

About this Earth doth run and ride.
 He knows he hath a home, but scarce knows where ;
 He sayes it is so far,
 That he hath quite forgot how to go there.

4.

He knocks at all doors, strays and roams ;
 Nay hath not so much wit as some stones have,
 Which in the darkeſt nights point to their homes

By ſome hid ſenſe their Maker gave ;
 Man is the ſhuttle, to whoſe winding queſt
 And paſſage through theſe looms
 God order'd motion, but ordain'd no reſt.

Walkt the other day, to ſpend my hour,
 Into a field,
 Where I ſometimes had ſeen the ſoil to yield

A gallant flowre ;
 But Winter now had ruffled all the bowre
 And curious ſtore
 I knew there heretofore.

2.

Yet I, whoſe ſearch lov'd not to peep and peer
 I'th' face of things,

Thought with my self, there might be other springs
 Besides this here,
 Which, like cold friends, fees us but once a year ;
 And so the flowre
 Might have some other bowre.

3.

Then taking up what I could neereft spie,
 I digg'd about
 That place where I had seen him to grow out ;
 And by and by
 I saw the warm Recluse alone to lie,
 Where fresh and green
 He lived of us unseen.

4.

Many a question Intricate and rare
 Did I there strow ;
 But all I could extort was, that he now
 Did there repair
 Such losses as befel him in this air,
 And would ere long
 Come forth most fair and young.

5.

This past, I threw the Clothes quite o'er his head ;
 And stung with fear
 Of my own frailty dropt down many a tear
 Upon his bed ;
 Then sighing whisper'd, Happy are the dead !
What peace doth now
Rock him asleep below !

And yet, how few believe such doctrine springs
 From a poor root,

Which all the Winter sleeps here under foot,
And hath no wings
To raise it to the truth and light of things ;
But is still trod
By ev'ry wandering clod.

7.

O Thou ! whose spirit did at first inflame
And warm the dead,
And by a sacred Incubation fed
With life this frame,
Which once had neither being, forme, nor name ;
Grant I may so
Thy steps track here below,

8.

That in these Masques and shadows I may see
Thy sacred way ;
And by those hid ascents climb to that day,
Which breaks from Thee,
Who art in all things, though invisibly !
Shew me thy peace,
Thy mercy, love, and ease !

9.

And from this Care, where dreams and sorrows reign,
Lead me above,
Where Light, Joy, Leisure, and true Comforts move
Without all pain ;
There, hid in thee, shew me his life again,
At whose dumb urn
Thus all the year I mourn !

Begging.

King of Mercy, King of Love,
In whom I live, in whom I move,
Perfect what thou hast begun,
Let no night put out this Sun.

Grant I may, my chief desire,
Long for thee, to thee aspire!
Let my youth, my bloom of dayes
Be my Comfort, and thy praise;
That hereafter, when I look
O'er the fullyed, sinful book,
I may find thy hand therein
Wiping out my shame and sin!
O it is thy only Art
To reduce a stubborn heart;
And since thine is victorie,
Strong holds should belong to thee;
Lord, then take it, leave it not
Unto my dispose or lot;
But since I would not have it mine,
O my God, let it be thine!

Jude ver. 24, 25.

*Now unto him that is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,
To the only wise God, our Saviour, be glory, and majesty, Dominion and power, now and ever, Amen.*

END OF THE FIRST PART.

SILEX SCINTILLANS.

PART II.

Silex Scintillans, &c.

Ascension-day.

Lord Jesus! with what sweetness and delights,
Sure, holy hopes, high joys, and quickning flights,
Dost thou feed thine! O thou! the hand that lifts

To him who gives all good and perfect gifts,
Thy glorious, bright Ascension, though remov'd
So many Ages from me, is so prov'd
And by thy Spirit seal'd to me, that I
Feel me a sharer in thy victory!

I soar and rise

Up to the skies,

Leaving the world their day;

And in my flight

For the true light

Go seeking all the way;

I greet thy Sepulchre, salute thy Grave,
That blest inclosure, where the Angels gave
The first glad tidings of thy early light,
And resurrection from the earth and night.
I see that morning in thy * Convert's tears,

* St. Mary Magdalene.

Fresh as the dew, which but this dawning wears.
I smell her spices ; and her ointment yields,
As rich a scent as the now Primros'd-fields.
The Day-star smiles, and light with the decess
Now shines in all the Chambers of the East.
What stirs, what posting intercourse and mirth
Of Saints and Angels glorifie the earth ?
What sighs, what whispers, busie stops and stays ;
Private and holy talk fill all the ways ?
They pass as at the last great day, and run
In their white robes to seek the risen Sun ;
I see them, hear them, mark their haste, and move
Amongst them, with them, wing'd with faith and love.
Thy forty days more secret commerce here
After thy death and Funeral, so clear
And indisputable, shews to my sight
As the Sun doth, which to those days gave light.
I walk the fields of Bethany, which shine
All now as fresh as Eden, and as fine.
Such was the bright world on the first seventh day,
Before man brought forth sin, and sin decay ;
When like a Virgin clad in Flowers and green
The pure earth sat, and the fair woods had seen
No frost, but flourish'd in that youthful vest,
With which their great Creator had them dress'd :
When Heav'n above them shin'd like molten glass,
While all the Planets did unclouded pass ;
And Springs, like dissolv'd Pearls their Streams did pour
Ne'er marr'd with floods, nor angered with a shower.
With these fair thoughts I move in this fair place,
And the last steps of my milde Master trace.
I see Him leading out his chosen Train
All sad with tears, which like warm Summer rain
In silent drops steal from their holy eyes,

Fix'd lately on the Cross, now on the skies.
 And now, eternal Jesus! thou dost heave
 Thy blessed hands to bless those thou dost leave.
 The cloud doth now receive thee, and their sight
 Having lost thee, behold two men in white!
 Two and no more: what two attest is true,
 Was thine own answer to the stubborn Jew.
 Come then, thou faithful witness! come, dear Lord,
 Upon the Clouds again to judge this world!

Ascension-Hymn.

Uft and clay,
 Man's antient wear,
 Here you must stay,
 But I elfewhere!
 Souls sojourn here, but may not rest;
 Who will ascend must be undrest.

And yet some,
 That know to die
 Before death come,
 Walk to the skie
 Even in this life; but all such can
 Leave behinde them the old Man.

If a star
 Should leave the Sphære,
 She must first mar
 Her flaming wear,
 And after fall, for in her dress
 Of glory, she cannot transgress.

Man of old
 Within the line
 Of Eden could
 Like the Sun shine,
 All naked, innocent and bright,
 And intimate with Heav'n, as light;

But since he
 That brightness foil'd,
 His garments be
 All dark and spoil'd,
 And here are left as nothing worth,
 Till the Refiner's fire breaks forth.

Then comes he!
 Whose mighty light
 Made his cloathes be
 Like Heav'n all bright;
 The Fuller, whose pure blood did flow,
 To make stain'd man more white than snow.

Hee alone
 And none else can Bring bone to bone
 And rebuild man;
 And by his all-subduing might
 Make clay ascend more quick than light.

Hey are all gone into the world of light!
 And I alone sit lingring here!
 Their very memory is fair and bright,
 And my sad thoughts doth clear.

It glows and glitters in my cloudy breast
Like stars upon some gloomy grove,
Or those faint beams in which this hill is drest
After the Sun's remove.

I see them walking in an Air of glory,
Whose light doth trample on my days;
My days, which are at best but dull and hoary,
Meer glimring and decays.

O holy hope! and high humility!
High as the Heavens above!
These are your walks, and you have shew'd them me
To kindle my cold love.

Dear, beauteous death; the Jewel of the Just!
Shining no where but in the dark;
What mysteries do lie beyond thy dust,
Could man outlook that mark!

He that hath found some fledg'd bird's nest may know
At first sight if the bird be flown;
But what fair Dell or Grove he sings in now,
That is to him unknown.

And yet, as Angels in some brighter dreams
Call to the soul when man doth sleep,
So some strange thoughts transcend our wonted theams,
And into glory peep.

If a star were confin'd into a Tomb,
Her captive flames must needs burn there;
But when the hand that lockt her up gives room,
She'll shine through all the sphere.

O Father of eternal life, and all
 Created glories under thee !
 Resume thy spirit from this world of thrall
 Into true liberty !

Either disperse these mists, which blot and fill
 My perspective still as they pass ;
 Or else remove me hence unto that hill,
 Where I shall need no glass.

White Sunday.

 Ellcome, white day ! a thousand Suns,
 Though seen at once, were black to thee !
 For after their light darkness comes ;
 But thine shines to eternity.

Those flames, which on the Apostles rush'd
 At this great feast, and in a tyre
 Of cloven Tongues their heads all brush'd,
 And crown'd them with Prophetic fire,—

Can these new lights be like to those,
 These lights of Serpents like the Dove ?
 Thou hadst no gall ev'n for thy foes,
 And thy two wings were Grief and Love.

Though then some boast that fire each day,
 And on Christ's coat pin all their shreds ;
 Not sparing openly to say,
 His candle shines upon their heads ;

Yet while some rays of that great light
 Shine here below within thy Book,

They never shall so blinde my sight
But I will know which way to look.

For though thou doest that great light lock,
And by this lesser commerce keep :
Yet by these glances of the flock
I can discern Wolves from the Sheep.

Not but that I have wishes too,
And pray, These last may be as first,
Or better ; but thou long ago
Hast said, These last should be the worst.

Besides, thy method with thy own,
Thy own dear people, pens our times ;
Our stories are in theirs set down,
And penalties spread to our Crimes.

Again, if worst and worst implies
A State that no redress admits,
Then from thy Cross unto these days
The rule without Exception fits.

And yet, as in night's gloomy page
One silent star may interline ;
So in this last and lewdest age
Thy antient love on some may shine.

For though we hourly breathe decays,
And our best note and highest ease
Is but meer changing of the keys,
And a Consumption that doth please ;

Yet thou the great eternal Rock
Whose height above all ages shines,

Art still the fame, and canst unlock
Thy waters to a soul that pines.

Since then thou art the fame this day
And ever as thou wert of old,
And nothing doth thy love allay,
But our heart's dead and sinful cold ;

As thou long since wert pleas'd to buy
Our drown'd estate, taking the Curse
Upon thy self, so to destroy
The knots we tyed upon thy purse,

So let thy grace now make the way
Even for thy love ; for by that means
We, who are nothing but foul clay,
Shall be fine gold which thou didst cleanse.

O come ! refine us with thy fire !
Refine us ! we are at a loss.
Let not thy stars for Balaam's hire
Dissolve into the common dross !

The Proffer.

BE still, black Parasites,
Flutter no more ;
Were it still winter, as it was before,
You'd make no flights ;
But now the dew and Sun have warm'd my bowres,
You flie and flock to suck the flowers.

But you would honey make :
These buds will wither,

And what you now extract, in harder weather
Will serve to take;
Wife husbands will, you say, their wants prevent,
Who do not so too late repent.

O poysonous, subtle fowls!
The flies of hell,
That buz in every ear, and blow on souls,
Until they smell,
And rot, descend not here, nor think to stay!
I've read, who 'twas drove you away.

Think you these longing eyes,
Though sick and spent,
And almost famish'd, ever will consent
To leave those skies,
That glass of souls and spirits, where well drest
They shine in white, like stars, and rest.

Shall my short hour, my inch,
My one poor sand,
And crum of life now ready to disband,
Revolt and flinch;
And having born the burthen all the day,
Now cast at night my Crown away?

No, No; I am not he;
Go seek elsewhere!
I skill not your fine tinsel, and false hair,
Your Sorcery,
And smooth seducements: I'll not stuff my story
With your poor Commonwealth and glory.

There are that will sow tares
And scatter death

Amongst the quick, felling their souls and breath
 For any wares ;
 But when thy Master comes, they'll finde and see,
 There's a reward for them and thee.

Then keep the antient way!
 Spit out their phlegm,
 And fill thy brest with home ; think on thy dream :
 A calm, bright day !
 A Land of flowers and spices ! the word given.
If these be fair, O what is Heaven !

Cock-crowing.

 Ather of lights ! what Sunnie feed,
 What glance of day hast thou confin'd
 Into this bird ? To all the breed
 This busie Ray thou hast assign'd ;
 Their magnetisme works all night,
 And dreams of Paradise and light.

Their eyes watch for the morning-hue,
 Their little grain expelling night
 So shines and fings, as if it knew
 The path unto the house of light.
 It seems their candle, howe'r done,
 Was tinn'd and lighted at the funne.

If such a tincture, such a touch,
 So firm a longing can impowre,
 Shall thy own image think it much
 To watch for thy appearing hour ?

If a meer blast so fill the fail,
Shall not the breath of God prevail?

O thou immortall light and heat!
Whose hand so shines through all this frame,
That by the beauty of the feat,
We plainly see who made the same.

Seeing thy seed abides in me,
Dwell thou in it, and I in thee!

To sleep without thee is to die;
Yea, 'tis a death partakes of hell:
For where thou dost not close the eye
It never opens, I can tell.

In such a dark, Ægyptian border,
The shades of death dwell and disorder.

If joyes, and hopes, and earnest throes,
And hearts, whose Pulse beats still for light,
Are given to birds; who, but thee, knows
A love-sick soul's exalted flight?

Can souls be track'd by any eye
But his, who gave them wings to flie?

Onely this Veyle which thou hast broke,
And must be broken yet in me,
This veyle, I say, is all the cloke
And cloud which shadows me from thee.

This veyle thy full-ey'd love denies,
And onely gleams and fractions spies.

O take it off! make no delay;
But brush me with thy light, that I
May shine unto a perfect day,
And warme me at thy glorious Eye!

O take it off! or till it flee,

Though with no Lillie, stay with me!

The Starre.

 Hat ever 'tis, whose beauty here below
Attracts thee thus, and makes thee stream and flow,
And wind and curle, and wink and smile,
Shifting thy gate and guile,

Though thy close commerce nought at all imbarres
My present search, for Eagles eye not starrs ;
And still the lesser by the best
And highest good is blest ;

Yet, seeing all things that subsist and be
Have their Commissions from Divinitie,
And teach us duty, I will see
What man may learn from thee.

First, I am sure, the Subject so respected
Is well-disposed ; for bodies, once infected,
Deprav'd, or dead, can have with thee
No hold, nor sympathie.

Next, there's in it a restless, pure desire
And longing for thy bright and vitall fire,
Desire that never will be quench'd,
Nor can be writh'd nor wrench'd.

These are the Magnets, which so strongly move
And work all night upon thy light and love ;

As beauteous shapes, we know not why,
Command and guide the eye.

For where desire, celestiall, pure desire,
Hath taken root, and grows, and doth not tire,
There God a Commerce states, and sheds
His Secret on their heads.

This is the Heart he craves; and who so will
But give it him, and grudge not; he shall feel
That God is true, as herbs unseen
Put on their youth and green.

The Palm-tree.

Eare friend, sit down, and bear awhile this shade,
As I have yours long since; This Plant,
you see
So prest and bow'd, before sin did degrade
Both you and it, had equall liberty

With other trees: but now shut from the breath
And air of Eden, like a mal-content
It thrives no where. This makes these weights like death
And sin, hang at him; for the more he's bent

The more he grows. Celestiall natures still Aspire for home; This Solomon of old
By flowers and carvings and mysterious skill
Of Wings, and Cherubims, and Palms foretold.

This is the life which hid above with Christ
 In God, doth always hidden multiply,
 And spring, and grow, a tree ne'r to be priced,
 A Tree, whose fruit is immortality.

Here spirits that have run their race, and fought,
 And won the fight, and have not feared the frowns
 Nor lov'd the smiles of greatness, but have wrought
 Their master's will, meet to receive their Crowns.

Here is the patience of the Saints : this Tree
 Is water'd by their tears, as flowers are fed
 With dew by night ; but One you cannot see
 Sits here, and numbers all the tears they shed.

Here is their faith too, which if you will keep
 When we two part, I will a journey make
 To pluck a Garland hence while you do sleep,
 And weave it for your head against you wake.

Joy.

E. dumb, coarse measures ; jar no more ;
 to me

There is no discord but your harmony,
 False, juggling sounds ; a grone well drest
 where care

Moves in disguise, and sighs afflict the air.
 Sorrows in white ; griefs tun'd ; a sugerd Dosis
 Of Wormwood, and a Death's-head crown'd with Roses.

He weighs not your forc'd accents, who can have
 A lesson plaid him by a winde or wave.

Such numbers tell their days, whose spirits be Lull'd by those Charmers to a Lethargy.

But as for thee, whose faults long since require
More eyes than stars, whose breath, could it aspire
To equal winds, would prove too short: Thou hast
Another mirth, a mirth, though overcast
With clouds and rain, yet full as calm and fine
As those clear heights which above tempests shine.

Therefore while the various showers
Kill and cure the tender flowers,
While the winds refresh the year
Now with clouds, now making clear,
Be sure under pains of death
To ply both thine eyes and breath.

As leaves in Bowers
Whisper their hours,
And Hermit-wells
Drop in their Cells:

So in sighs and unseen tears
Pass thy solitary years,

And going hence leave written on some Tree,
Sighs make joy sure, and shaking fastens thee.

The Favour.

Thy bright looks! thy glance of love
Shown, and but shown, me from above!
Rare looks! that can dispense such joy
As without wooing wins the coy,
And makes him mourn, and pine and dye,
Like a starv'd Eaglet, for thine eye.
Some kinde herbs here, though low and far,

Watch for, and know their loving star.
O let no star compare with thee!
Nor any herb out-duty me!
So shall my nights and mornings be
Thy time to shine, and mine to see.

The Garland.

Hou, who dost flow and flourish here below,
To whom a falling star and nine dayes'
glory, [shew,
Or some frail beauty makes the bravest
Hark, and make use of this ensuing story.

When first my youthfull, sinfull age
Grew master of my wayes,
Appointing errour for my Page,
And darknesse for my dayes;
I flung away, and with full crie
Of wild affections, rid
In post for pleasures, bent to trie
All gamesters that would bid.
I played with fire, did counsell spurn,
Made life my common stake;
But never thought that fire would burn,
Or that a soul could ake.
Glorious deceptions, gilded mists,
False joyes, phantastick flights,
Peeces of sackcloth with silk lists,
These were my prime delights.
I sought choice bowres, haunted the spring,
Cull'd flowres and made me posies;

Gave my fond humours their full wing,
 And crown'd my head with Roses.
 But at the height of this Careire
 I met with a dead man,
 Who, noting well my vain Abear,
 Thus unto me began :
 Desist, fond fool, be not undone,
 What thou hast cut to day
 Will fade at night, and with this Sun
 Quite vanish and decay.

*Flowres gather'd in this world, die here ; if thou
 Wouldst have a wreath that fades not, let them grow,
 And grow for thee. Who spares them here, shall find
 A Garland, where comes neither rain, nor wind.*

Love-sick.

JESUS, my life ! how shall I truly love thee ?
 O that thy Spirit would so strongly move me ;

That thou wert pleased to shed thy grace so farr
 As to make man all pure love, flesh a star !
 A star that would ne'r set, but ever rise,
 So rise and run, as to out-run these skies,
 These narrow skies (narrow to me) that barre,
 So barre me in, that I am still at warre,
 At constant warre with them. O come and rend,
 Or bow the heavens ! Lord bow them and descend,
 And at thy presence make these mountains flow,
 These mountains of cold Ice in me ! Thou art

Refining fire, O then refine my heart,
 My foul, foul heart ! Thou art immortall heat ;
 Heat motion gives ; Then warm it, till it beat,
 So beat for thee, till thou in mercy hear,
 So hear, that thou must open : open to
 A finfull wretch, A wretch that caus'd thy woe ;
 Thy woe, who caus'd his weal ; so far his weal
 That thou forgott'st thine own, for thou didst seal
 Mine with thy blood, thy blood which makes thee mine,
 Mine ever, ever ; And me ever thine.

Trinity-Sunday.

Holy, blessed, glorious three,
 Eternall witnesse that be
 In heaven, One God in trinitie !

As here on earth, when men with-stood,
 The Spirit, Water, and the Blood,
 Made my Lord's Incarnation good :

So let the Anty-types in me
 Elected, bought, and seal'd for free,
 Be own'd, sav'd, Sainted by you three !

Pfalme 104.

P, O my foul, and bleſſe the Lord ! O God,
My God, how great, how very great art thou !

Honour and majeſty have their abode
With thee, and crown thy brow.

Thou cloath'ſt thy ſelf with light, as with a robe,
And the high, glorious heav'ns thy mighty hand
Doth ſpread like curtains round about this globe
Of Air, and Sea, and Land.

The beams of thy bright Chambers thou doſt lay
In the deep waters, which no eye can find ;
The clouds thy chariots are, and thy path-way
The wings of the ſwift wind.

In thy ceſtiall, gladſome meſſages
Diſpatch'd to holy ſouls, ſick with deſire
And love of thee, each willing Angel is Thy miniſter in fire.

Thy arm unmoveable for ever laid
And founded the firm earth ; then with the deep
As with a vail thou hidſt it ; thy floods plaid
Above the mountains ſleep.

At thy rebuke they fled, at the known voice
Of their Lord's thunder they retir'd apace :
Some up the mountains paſt by ſecret ways,
Some downwards to their place.

For thou to them a bound hast fet, a bound,
 Which, though but sand, keeps in and curbs whole seas :

There all their fury, foame and hideous found
 Must languish and decrease.

And as thy care bounds these, so thy rich love
 Doth broach the earth ; and lesser brooks lets forth,
 Which run from hills to valleys, and improve
 Their pleasure and their worth.

These to the beasts of every field give drink ;
 There the wilde asses swallow the cool spring :
 And birds amongst the branches on their brink
 Their dwellings have and sing.

Thou from thy upper Springs above, from those
 Chambers of rain, where Heav'n's large bottles lie,
 Dost water the parch'd hills, whose breaches close
 Heal'd by the showers from high.

Grass for the cattel, and herbs for man's use
 Thou mak'st to grow ; these, blest by thee, the earth
 Brings forth, with wine, oyl, bread : All which infuse
 To man's heart strength and mirth.

Thou giv'st the trees their greenness, ev'n to those Cedars in Lebanon, in whose thick boughs
 The birds their nests build ; though the Stork doth
 The fir-trees for her house. [choose

To the wilde goats the high hills serve for folds,
 The rocks give Conies a retyring place :
 Above them the cool Moon her known course holds,
 And the Sun runs his race.

Thou makest darkness, and then comes the night ;
 In whose thick shades and silence each wilde beast
 Creeps forth, and pinch'd for food, with scent and fight
 Hunts in an eager quest.

The Lyon's whelps impatient of delay
 Roar in the covert of the woods, and seek
 Their meat from thee, who doest appoint the prey,
 And feed'th them all the week.

This past; the Sun shines on the earth ; and they Retire into their dens ; Man goes abroad
 Unto his work, and at the close of day
 Returns home with his load.

O Lord my God, how many and how rare
 Are thy great works ! In wisdom hast thou made
 Them all ; and this the earth, and every blade
 Of grafs we tread declare.

So doth the deep and wide sea, wherein are Innumerable, creeping things, both small
 And great : there ships go, and the shipmen's fear,
 The comely spacious Whale.

These all upon thee wait, that thou maist feed
 Them in due season : what thou giv'st they take ;
 Thy bounteous open hand helps them at need,
 And plenteous meals they make.

When thou doest hide thy face (thy face which keeps
 All things in being) they consume and mourn :
 When thou with-draw'st their breath their vigour sleeps,
 And they to dust return.

Curb'd them, and cloath'd thee well and warm.

All things that be praise Him ; and had
Their lesson taught them when first made.

So hills and valleys into singing break ;
And though poor stones have neither speech nor tongue,
While active winds and streams both run and speak,
Yet stones are deep in admiration.

Thus Praise and Prayer here beneath the Sun
Make lesser mornings, when the great are done.

For each inclosed Spirit is a star
Inlightning his own little sphere,
Whose light, though fetcht and borrowed from far,
Both mornings makes and evenings there.

But as these Birds of light make a land glad,
Chirping their solemn Matins on each tree :
So in the shades of night some dark fowls be,
Whose heavy notes make all that hear them sad.

The Turtle then in Palm-trees mourns,
While Owls and Satyrs howl ;
The pleasant Land to brimstone turns,
And all her streams grow foul.

Brightness and mirth, and love and faith, all flye,
Till the Day-spring breaks forth again from high.

The Timber.

Ure thou didst flourish once ! and many
Springs,
Many bright mornings, much dew, many showers

Past ore thy head : many light Hearts and Wings,
Which now are dead, lodg'd in my living bowers.

And still a new succession fings and flies ;
Fresh Groves grow up, and their green branches shoot

Towards the old and still enduring skies ;
While the low Violet thrives at their root.

But thou beneath the sad and heavy Line
Of death doth waste all senseless, cold and dark ;
Where not so much as dreams of light may shine,
Nor any thought of greenness, leaf or bark.

And yet, as if some deep hate and dissent,
Bred in thy growth betwixt high winds and thee,
Were still alive, thou dost great storms resent,
Before they come, and know'st how near they be.

Else all at rest thou lyest, and the fierce breath
Of tempests can no more disturb thy ease ;
But this thy strange resentment after death
Means onely those who broke in life thy peace.

So murdered man, when lovely life is done,
And his blood freez'd, keeps in the Center still
Some secret sense, which makes the dead blood run
At his approach that did the body kill.

And is there any murth'rer worse than sin ?
Or any storms more foul than a lewd life ?
Or what Resentient can work more within,
Than true remorse, when with past sins at strife ?

He that hath left life's vain joys and vain care,
And truly hates to be detain'd on earth,

Hath got an house where many mansions are,
And keeps his soul unto eternal mirth.

But though thus dead unto the world, and ceas'd
From sin, he walks a narrow, private way ;
Yet grief and old wounds make him sore displeas'd,
And all his life a rainy, weeping day.

For though he should forsake the world, and live
As meer a stranger, as men long since dead ;
Yet joy it self will make a right soul grieve
To think, he should be so long vainly led.

But as shades set off light, so tears and grief,
Though of themselves but a sad blubber'd story,
By shewing the sin great, shew the relief
Far greater, and so speak my Saviour's glory.

If my way lies through deserts and wilde woods,
Where all the Land with scorching heat is curst ;
Better the pools should flow with rain and floods
To fill my bottle than I die with thirst.

Blest showers they are, and streams sent from above,
Begetting Virgins where they use to flow ;
The trees of life no other waters love,
Than upper springs, and none else make them grow.

But these chaste fountains flow not till we dye ;
Some drops may fall before, but a clear spring
And ever running, till we leave to fling
Dirt in her way, will keep above the skie.

Rom. Cap. 6. ver. 7.

He that is dead, is freed from sin.

The Jews.

When the fair year
 Of your Deliverer comes,
 And that long frost which now benums
 Your hearts shall thaw; when Angels here
 Shall yet to man appear,
 And familiarly confer
 Beneath the Oke and Juniper;
 When the bright Dove,
 Which now these many, many Springs
 Hath kept above,
 Shall with spread wings
 Descend, and living waters flow
 To make drie dust, and dead trees grow;

 O then that I
 Might live, and see the Olive bear
 Her proper branches! which now lie
 Scattered each where;
 And without root and sap, decay
 Cast by the husband-man away.
 And sure it is not far!
 For as your fast and foul decays,
 Forerunning the bright morning star,
 Did sadly note His healing rayes
 Would shine elsewhere, since you were blind,
 And would be cross, when God was kinde,—

 So by all signs
 Our fulness too is now come in;
 And the same Sun, which here declines
 And sets, will few hours hence begin

To rise on you again, and look
Towards old Mamre and Eshcol's brook.

For surely he
Who lov'd the world so, as to give
His onely Son to make it free,
Whose spirit too doth mourn and grieve
To see man lost, will for old love
From your dark hearts this veil remove.

Faith sojourn'd first on earth in you,
You were the dear and chosen stock :
The Arm of God, glorious and true,
Was first reveal'd to be your rock.

You were the eldest childe, and when
Your stony hearts despised love,
The youngest, ev'n the Gentiles, then
Were chear'd your jealousy to move.

Thus, Righteous Father ! dost thou deal
With Brutish men ; Thy gifts go round
By turns, and timely, and so heal
The lost Son by the newly found.

Begging.

Ye Do not go ! thou know'st, I'll dye !
My Spring and Fall are in thy book !
Or, if thou goest, do not deny
To lend me, though from far, one look !

My sins long since have made thee strange,
A very stranger unto me ;

No morning-meetings since this change,
Nor evening-walks have I with thee.

Why is my God thus flow and cold,
When I am most, most sick and sad?
Well fare those blessed days of old,
When thou didst hear the *weeping Lad!

O do not thou do as I did,
Do not despise a Love-sick heart!
What though some clouds defiance bid,
Thy Sun must shine in every part.

Though I have spoil'd, O spoil not thou!
Hate not thine own dear gift and token!
Poor birds sing best, and prettiest show,
When their nest is faln and broken.

Dear Lord! restore thy ancient peace,
Thy quikning friendship, mans bright wealth!
And if thou wilt not give me ease
From sicknesse, give my spirit health!

Palm-Sunday.

Ome, drop your branches, strow the way,
Plants of the day!
Whom sufferings make most green and gay.

* Isbmael.

The King of grief, the man of sorrow,
Weeping still like the wet morrow,
Your shades and freshness comes to borrow.

Put on, put on your best array ;
Let the joy'd road make holy-day,
And flowers, that into fields do stray
Or secret groves, keep the high-way.

Trees, flowers and herbs ; birds, beasts and stones,
That since man fell expect with groans
To see the Lamb, come all at once,
Lift up your heads and leave your moans !

For here comes he
Whose death will be
Man's life, and your full liberty.

Hark ! how the children shrill and high
Hosanna cry ;

Their joys provoke the distant skie,
Where thrones and Seraphins reply ;
And their own Angels shine and sing

In a bright ring :
Such yong, sweet mirth
Makes heaven and earth

Joyn in a joyful Symphony.

The harmless, yong and happy As,
Seen long before * this came to pass,
Is in these joys an high partaker,
Ordain'd and made to bear his Maker.

Dear feast of Palms, of Flowers and Dew !
Whose fruitful dawn sheds hopes and lights ;

* Zecbariah, chap. 9. ver. 9.

Thy bright solemnities did shew,
The third glad day through two sad nights.

I'll get me up before the Sun,
I'll cut me boughs off many a tree,
And all alone full early run
To gather flowers to wellcome thee.

Then like the Palm, though wronged I'll bear,
I will be still a childe, still meek
As the poor Afs, which the proud jeer,
And onely my dear Jesus seek.

If I lose all, and must endure
The proverb'd griefs of holy Job,
I care not, so I may secure
But one green Branch and a white robe.

Jesus weeping.

S. Luke 19. ver. 41.

Blessed, unhappy City! dearly lov'd,
But still unkinde! Art this day nothing mov'd?

Art senseless still? O can'st thou sleep
When God himself for thee doth weep?
Stiff-necked Jews! your father's breed
That serv'd the calf, not Abr'am's seed,
Had not the Babes Hosanna cryed,
The stones had spoke what you denyed.

Dear Jesus, weep on! pour this latter
Soul quickning rain, this living water

On their dead hearts ; but (O my fears !)
 They will drink blood that despise tears.
 My dear, bright Lord ! my Morning-star !
 Shed this live-dew on fields which far
 From hence long for it ! shed it there,
 Where the starv'd earth groans for one tear !

This land, though with thy heart's blest extract fed,
 Will nothing yield but thorns to wound thy head.

The Daughter of Herodias.

St. Matth. chap. 14. ver. 6. &c.

Ain, sinful Art ! who first did fit
 Thy lewd loath'd Motions unto sounds,
 And made grave Musique, like wilde wit,
 Erre in loose airs beyond her bounds,

What fires hath he heap'd on his head !
 Since to his fins, as needs it must,
 His Art adds still, though he be dead,
 New fresh accounts of blood and lust.

Leave then,* yong Sorcerers ; the Ice
 Will those coy spirits cast asleep,
 Which teach thee now to please† his eyes
 Who doth thy lothsome mother keep.

* Her name was Salome ; in passing over a frozen river, the ice broke under her, and chopt off her head.

† Herod Antipas.

But thou hast pleas'd so well, he swears,
 And gratifies thy sin with vows;
 His shameless lust in publick wears,
 And to thy soft arts strongly bows.

Skilful Incantress, and true bred!
 Who out of evil can bring forth good!
 Thy mother's nets in thee were spread,
 She tempts to Incest, thou to blood.

Jesus weeping.

St. John chap. 11. ver. 35.

MY dear, Almighty Lord! why dost thou weep?
 Why dost thou groan and groan again?
 And with such deep,
 Repeated sighs thy kinde heart pain?
 Since the same sacred breath, which thus
 Doth Mourn for us,
 Can make man's dead and scatter'd bones
 Unite, and raise up all that dyed at once?

O holy groans! Groans of the Dove!
 O healing tears! the tears of love!
 Dew of the dead! which makes dust move
 And spring, how is't that you so sadly grieve,
 Who can relieve?

Should not thy sighs refrain thy store
 Of tears, and not provoke to more?

Since two afflictions may not reign
In one at one time, as some feign.
Those blasts, which o'er our heads here stray,
If showers then fall, will showers allay;
As those poor Pilgrims oft have tryed,
Who in this windy world abide.

Dear Lord ! thou art all grief and love ;
But which thou art most, none can prove.
Thou griev'st, man should himself undo,
And lov'st him, though he works thy wo.

'Twas not that vast, almighty measure
Which is requir'd to make up life,
Though purchas'd with thy heart's dear treasure,
Did breed this strife
Of grief and pity in thy breast,
The throne where peace and power rest :
But 'twas thy love that, without leave,
Made thine eyes melt, and thy heart heave.
For though death cannot so undo
What thou hast done, yea though man too
Should help to spoil, thou canst restore
All better far than 'twas before.
Yet thou so full of pity art,
Pity which overflows thy heart !
That, though the Cure of all man's harm
Is nothing to thy glorious arm,
Yet canst not thou that free Cure do,
But thou must sorrow for him too.

Then farewell joys ! for while I live,
My business here shall be to grieve :
A grief that shall outshine all joys

For mirth and life, yet without noise.
 A grief, whose silent dew shall breed
 Lilies and Myrrhe, where the curs'd seed
 Did sometimes rule. A grief so bright,
 'Twill make the Land of darkness light;
 And while too many sadly roam,
 Shall fend me Swan-like singing home.

Pfal. 73. ver. 25.

Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth, that I desire besides thee.

Providence.

Acres and secret hand!
 By whose assisting, swift command
 The Angel shewd that holy Well,
 Which freed poor Hagar from her fears,
 And turn'd to smiles the begging tears
 Of yong, distressed Ismael.

How in a mystick Cloud
 Which doth thy strange sure mercies shroud,
 Doeſt thou convey man food and money,
 Unseen by him till they arrive
 Juſt at his mouth, that thankleſs hive,
 Which kills thy Bees, and eats thy honey!

If I thy ſervant be,
 Whoſe ſervice makes ev'n captives free,
 A fiſh ſhall all my tribute pay,

The swift-wing'd Raven shall bring me meat,
 And I like Flowers shall still go neat,
 As if I knew no month but May.

I will not fear what man
 With all his plots and power can.
 Bags that wax old may plundered be;
 But none can sequester or let
 A state that with the Sun doth set,
 And comes next morning fresh as he.

Poor birds this doctrine sing,
 And herbs which on dry hills do spring,
 Or in the howling wilderness
 Do know thy dewy morning hours,
 And watch all night for mists or showers,
 Then drink and praise thy bounteousness.

May he for ever dye
 Who trusts not thee! but wretchedly
 Hunts gold and wealth, and will not lend
 Thy service nor his soul one day!
 May his Crown, like his hopes, be clay;
 And what he saves, may his foes spend!

If all my portion here,
 The measure given by thee each year,
 Were by my causeless enemies
 Usurp'd; it never should me grieve,
 Who know how well thou canst relieve,
 Whose hands are open as thine eyes.

Great King of love and truth!
 Who would'st not hate my froward youth,

And wilt not leave me when grown old ;
 Gladly will I, like Pontick sheep,
 Unto my wormwood-diet keep,
 Since thou hast made thy Arm my fold.

The Knot.

Right Queen of Heaven ! God's Virgin
 Spouse !

The glad world's blessed maid !
 Whose beauty tyed life to thy house,
 And brought us saving ayd.

Thou art the true Loves-knot ; by thee
 God is made our Allie ;
 And man's inferior Essence He
 With His did dignifie.

For Coalescent by that Band
 We are His body grown,
 Nourished with favors from His hand
 Whom for our head we own.

And such a Knot what arm dares loose,
 What life, what death can sever ?
 Which us in Him, and Him in us,
 United keeps for ever.

The Ornament.

He lucky world shewd me one day
Her gorgeous Mart and glittering store,
Where with proud haste the rich made way
To buy, the poor came to adore.

Serious they seem'd and bought up all
The latest Modes of pride and lust;
Although the first must surely fall,
And the last is most loathsome dust.

But while each gay, alluring ware
With idle hearts and busie looks
They viewd, for idleness hath there
Laid up all her Archives and books,

Quite through their proud and pompous file
Blushing, and in meek weeds array'd,
With native looks which knew no guile,
Came the sheep-keeping Syrian Maid.

Whom strait the shining Row all fac'd,
Forc'd by her artless looks and dress;
While once cryed out, We are disgrac'd!
For she is bravest, you confess.

St. Mary Magdalen.

Ear, beauteous Saint! more white than day,
 When in his naked, pure array;
 Fresher than morning-flowers which shew

As thou in tears dost, best in dew.
 How art thou chang'd, how lively-fair,
 Pleasing and innocent an air,
 Not tutor'd by thy glafs, but free,
 Native and pure, shines now in thee!
 But since thy beauty doth still keep
 Bloomy and fresh, why dost thou weep?
 'This dusky state of sighs and tears
 Durst not look on those smiling years,
 When Magdal-castle was thy seat,
 Where all was sumptuous, rare and neat.
 Why lies this Hair despised now
 Which once thy care and art did shew?
 Who then did dress the much lov'd toy,
 In Spires, Globes, angry Curls and coy,
 Which with skill'd negligence seem'd shed
 About thy curious, wilde, young head?
 Why is this rich, this Pistie Nard
 Spilt, and the box quite broke and marr'd?
 What pretty fullness did haste
 Thy easie hands to do this waste?
 Why art thou humbled thus, and low
 As earth thy lovely head dost bow?
 Dear Soul! thou knew'st, flowers here on earth
 At their Lord's foot-stool have their birth;
 Therefore thy wither'd self in haste

Beneath his blest feet thou didst cast,
That at the root of this green tree
Thy great decays restor'd might be.
Thy curious vanities and rare,
Odorous ointments kept with care,
And dearly bought, when thou didst see
They could not cure nor comfort thee ;
Like a wife, early Penitent,
Thou sadly didst to him present,
Whose interceding, meek and calm
Blood, is the world's all-healing Balm.
This, this Divine Restorative
Call'd forth thy tears, which ran in live
And hasty drops, as if they had (Their Lord so near) sense to be glad.
Learn, Ladies, here the faithful cure
Makes beauty lasting, fresh and pure ;
Learn Mary's art of tears, and then
Say, You have got the day from men.
Cheap, mighty Art ! her Art of love,
Who lov'd much, and much more could move ;
Her Art ! whose memory must last
Till truth through all the world be past ;
Till his abus'd, despis'd flame
Return to Heaven, from whence it came,
And send a fire down, that shall bring
Destruction on his ruddy wing.
Her Art ! whose pensive, weeping eyes,
Were once sins loose and tempting spies ;
But now are fixed stars, whose light
Helps such dark straglers to their fight.

Self-boasting Pharisee ! how blinde
A Judge wert thou, and how unkinde !

It was impossible, that thou,
 Who wert all false should'st true grief know.
 Is't just to judge her faithful tears
 By that foul rheum thy false eye wears?

This Woman, say'st thou, is a sinner!
 And fate there none such at thy dinner?
 Go Leper, go! wash till thy flesh
 Comes like a childe's spotless and fresh;
 He is still leprous that still paints:
 Who Saint themselves, they are no Saints.

The Rain-bow.

Till young and fine! but what is still in view
 We slight as old and foil'd, though fresh and new.
 How bright wert thou, when Shem's admiring eye
 Thy burnisht, flaming Arch did first descry!
 When Terah, Nabor, Haran, Abram, Lot,
 The youthful world's gray fathers in one knot,
 Did with intentive looks watch every hour
 For thy new light, and trembled at each shower!
 When thou dost shine darkness looks white and fair,
 Forms turn to Musick, clouds to smiles and air:
 Rain gently spends his honey-drops, and pours
 Balm on the cleft earth, milk on grass and flowers.
 Bright pledge of peace and Sun-shine! the sure tye
 Of thy Lord's hand, the *object of His eye!

When I behold thee, though my light be dim,
Distant and low, I can in thine see Him,
Who looks upon thee from His glorious throne,
And mindes the Covenant 'twixt All and One.
O foul, deceitful men! my God doth keep
His promise still, but we break ours and sleep.
After the Fall the first sin was in Blood,
And Drunkennes quickly did succeed the flood;
But since Christ dyed, (as if we did devise
To lose him too, as well as Paradise,)
These two grand sins we joyn and act together,
Though blood and drunkeness make but foul, foul weather.

Water, though both Heaven's windows and the deep
Full forty days o'r the drown'd world did weep,
Could not reform us, and blood in despight,
Yea God's own blood, we tread upon and flight.
So those bad daughters, which God sav'd from fire,
While Sodom yet did smoke lay with their fire.

Then peaceful, signal bow, but in a cloud
Still lodged, where all thy unseen arrows shrowd;
I will on thee as on a Comet look,
A Comet, the sad world's ill-boding book;
Thy light as luctual and stain'd with woes
I'll judge, where penal flames sit mixt and close.
For though some think, thou shin'st but to restrain
Bold storms, and simply dost attend on rain;
Yet I know well, and so our sins require,
Thou dost but Court cold rain, till Rain turns Fire.

The Seed growing secretly.

S. Mark. 4. 26.

F this world's friends might see but once
 What some poor man may often feel,
 Glory and gold and Crowns and Thrones,
 They would soon quit, and learn to kneel.

My dew, my dew ! my early love,
 My soul's bright food, thy absence kills !
 Hover not long, eternal Dove !
 Life without thee is loose and spills.

Something I had, which long ago
 Did learn to suck and sip and taste ;
 But now grown sickly, sad and slow,
 Doth fret and wrangle, pine and waste.

O spread thy sacred wings, and shake
 One living drop ! one drop life keeps !
 If pious griefs Heaven's joys awake,
 O fill his bottle ! thy child weeps !

Slowly and sadly doth he grow,
 And soon as left shrinks back to ill ;
 O feed that life, which makes him blow
 And spread and open to thy will !

For thy eternal, living wells
 None stain'd or wither'd shall come near :
 A fresh, immortal green there dwells,
 And spotless white is all the wear.

Dear, secret Greenness! nurst below!

Tempests and windes and winter-nights,
Vex not, that but one sees thee grow,
That One made all these lesser lights.

If those bright joys He singly sheds

On thee, were all met in one Crown,
Both Sun and Stars would hide their heads;
And Moons, though full, would get them down.

Let glory be their bait, whose mindes

Are all too high for a low Cell:
Though Hawks can prey through storms and winds,
The poor Bee in her hive must dwell.

Glory, the croud's cheap tinsel, still

To what most takes them is a drudge;
And they too oft take good for ill,
And thriving vice for vertue judge.

What needs a Conscience calm and bright

Within itself an outward test?
Who breaks his glass to take more light,
Makes way for storms into his rest.

Then blest thy secret growth, nor catch

At noise, but thrive unseen and dumb;
Keep clean, bear fruit, earn life, and watch,
Till the white winged Reapers come!

 S time one day by me did pass,
 Through a large dusky glasse
 He held, I chanc'd to look,
 And spyed his curious book
 Of past days, where sad Heav'n did shed
 A mourning light upon the dead.

Many disordered lives I saw,
 And foul records which thaw
 My kinde eyes still, but in
 A fair, white page of thin
 And ev'n, smooth lines, like the Sun's rays,
 Thy name was writ, and all thy days.

O bright and happy Kalendar !
 Where youth, shines like a star
 All pearl'd with tears, and may
 Teach age The Holy way ;
 Where through thick pangs, high agonies,
 Faith into life breaks, and death dies.

As some meek night-piece, which day quails,
 To candle-light unveils :
 So by one beauty line
 From thy bright lamp did shine
 In the same page thy humble grave,
 Set with green herbs, glad hopes and brave.

Here slept my thought's dear mark ! which dust
 Seem'd to devour like rust ;
 But dust, I did observe,

By hiding doth preserve ;
 As we for long and sure recruits,
 Candy with sugar our choice fruits.

O calm and sacred bed, where lies
 In death's dark mysteries
 A beauty far more bright
 Than the noon's cloudless light ;
 For whose dry dust green branches bud,
 And robes are bleach'd in the Lamb's blood.

Sleep, happy ashes ! blessed sleep !
 While hapless I still weep ;
 Weep that I have out liv'd
 My life, and unreliev'd
 Must, foul-less shadow ! so live on,
 Though life be dead, and my joys gone.

Air and yong light ! my guide to holy
 Grief, and soul-curing melancholy ;
 Whom living here I did still shun
 As sullen night-ravens do the Sun,

And led by my own foolish fire
 Wandred through darkness, dens and mire.
 How am I now in love with all
 That I term'd then meer bonds and thrall !
 And to thy name, which still I keep,
 Like the surviving turtle weep !
 O bitter curs'd delights of men !
 Our soul's diseases first, and then

Our body's: poysons that intreat
With fatal sweetnefs, till we eat ;
How artfully do you destroy,
That kill with smiles and seeming joy !
If all the subtilties of vice
Stood bare before unpractic'd eyes,
And every act she doth commence
Had writ down its sad consequence,
Yet would not men grant, their ill fate
Lodged in those false looks, till too late.
O holy, happy, healthy heaven,
Where all is pure, where all is even,
Plain, harmless, faithful, fair and bright,
But what Earth breaths against thy light !
How blest had men been, had their Sire
Liv'd still in league with thy chaste fire ;
Nor made life through her long descents
A slave to lustful Elements !
I did once read in an old book
Soil'd with many a weeping look,
That the seeds of foul sorrows be
The finest things that are to see.
So that fam'd fruit, which made all dye
Seem'd fair unto the woman's eye.
If these supplanters in the shade
Of Paradise could make man fade,
How in this world should they deter,
This world, their fellow-murderer !
And why then grieve we to be sent
Home by our first fair punishment,
Without addition to our woes
And lingering wounds from weaker foes ;
Since that doth quickly freedom win,
Far be that's dead is freed from sin ?

O that I were winged and free
 And quite undrest just now with thee,
 Where freed souls dwell by living fountains
 On everlasting, spicy mountains !

Alas ! my God ! take home thy sheep ;
 This world but laughs at those that weep.

The Stone.

Josh. chap. 24. ver. 27.

Have it now :

But where to act that none shall know ;
 Where I shall have no cause to fear
 An eye or ear,

What man will show ?

If nights, and shades, and secret rooms,
 Silent as tombs,

Will not conceal nor assent to
 My dark designs, what shall I do ?
 Man I can bribe, and woman will
 Consent to any gainful ill,
 But these dumb creatures are so true,
 No gold nor gifts can them subdue.
Hedges have ears, saith the old sooth,
And ev'ry bush is something's booth ;
 This cautious fools mistake, and fear
 Nothing but man when ambush'd there.

But I Alas !

Was shown one day in a strange glass
 That busie commerce kept between
 God and his Creatures, though unseen.

They hear, see, speak,
 And into loud discoveries break,
 As loud as blood. Not that God needs
 Intelligence, whose spirit feeds
 All things with life, before whose eye,
 Hell and all hearts stark naked lye.
 But *he that judgeth as he hears,
 He that accuseth none, so steers
 His righteous course, that though he knows
 All that man doth, conceals or shows,
 Yet will not he by his own light,
 Though both all-seeing and all right,
 Condemn men ; but will try them by
 A process, which ev'n man's own eye
 Must needs acknowledge to be just.

Hence sand and dust
 Are shak'd for witnesses, and stones,
 Which some think dead, shall all at once
 With one attesting voice detect
 Those secret sins we least suspect.
 For know, wilde men, that when you erre
 Each thing turns Scribe and Register,
 And in obedience to his Lord,
 Doth your most private sins record.

The Law delivered to the Jews,
 Who promis'd much, but did refuse
 Performance, will for that same deed
 Against them by a stone proceed ;
 Whose substance, though 'tis hard enough,
 Will prove their hearts more stiff and tuff.
 But now, since God on himself took

* John chap. 5. ver. 30, 45.

What all mankinde could never brook,
 If any (for He all invites)
 His easie yoke rejects or flights,
 The Gospel then, for 'tis His word,
 And not himself* shall judge the world,
 Will by loose Dust that man arraign,
 As one than dust more vile and vain.

The dwelling-place.

S. John, chap. 1. ver. 38, 39.

 Hat happy, secret fountain,
 Fair shade, or mountain,
 Whose undiscover'd virgin glory
 Boasts it this day, though not in story,
 Was then thy dwelling? did some cloud,
 Fix'd to a Tent, descend and shrowd
 My distrest Lord? or did a star,
 Beckon'd by thee, though high and far,
 In sparkling smiles haste gladly down
 To lodge light and increase her own?
 My dear, dear God! I do not know
 What lodged thee then, nor where, nor how;
 But I am sure thou dost now come
 Oft to a narrow, homely room,
 Where thou too hast but the least part;
 My God, I mean my sinful heart.

* St. John, chap. 12. ver. 47, 48.

The Men of War.

S. Luke, chap. 23. ver. 11.

*For any have an ear,
Saith holy * John, then let him hear!
He, that into Captivity
Leads others, shall a Captive be.*

*Who with the sword doth others kill,
A sword shall his blood likewise spill.
Here is the patience of the Saints,
And the true faith which never faints.*

Were not thy word, dear Lord! my light,
How would I run to endless night,
And persecuting thee and thine,
Enact for Saints myself and mine!
But now enlighten'd thus by thee,
I dare not think such villany;
Nor for a temporal self-end
Successful wickedness commend.
For in this bright, instructing verse
Thy Saints are not the Conquerors;
But patient, meek, and overcome
Like thee, when set at naught and dumb.
Armies thou hast in Heaven, which fight
And follow thee all cloath'd in white;
But here on earth, though thou hadst need,
Thou wouldst no legions, but wouldst bleed.
The sword wherewith thou dost command
Is in thy mouth, not in thy hand,

* Revel. cap. 13. ver. 10.

And all thy Saints do overcome
By thy blood, and their Martyrdom.
But seeing Soldiers long ago
Did spit on thee, and smote thee too;
Crown'd thee with thorns, and bow'd the knee,
But in contempt, as still we see,
I'll marvel not at ought they do,
Because they us'd my Savior so;
Since of my Lord they had their will,
The servant must not take it ill.

Dear Jesus, give me patience here,
And faith to see my Crown as near,
And almost reach'd, because 'tis sure
If I hold fast, and slight the Lure.
Give me humility and peace,
Contented thoughts, innoxious ease,
A sweet, revengeless, quiet minde,
And to my greatest haters kinde.
Give me, my God! a heart as milde
And plain, as when I was a childe.
That when thy Throne is set, and all
These Conquerors before it fall,
I may be found preserv'd by thee
Amongst that chosen company,
Who by no blood here overcame
But the blood of the blessed Lamb.

The Afs.

St. Matt. 21.

Hou! who didst place me in this busie street
 Of flesh and blood, where two ways meet:
 The One of goodnes, peace and life,
 The other of death, sin and strife;
 Where frail visibles rule the minde,
 And present things finde men most kinde;
 Where obscure cares the mean defeat,
 And splendid vice destroys the great;
 As thou didst set no law for me,
 But that of perfect liberty,
 Which neither tyres, nor doth corrode,
 But is a Pillow, not a Load:
 So give me grace ever to rest,
 And build on it because the best;
 Teach both mine eyes and feet to move
 Within those bounds set by thy love;
 Grant I may soft and lowly be,
 And minde those things I cannot see;
 Tye me to faith, though above reason,
 Who question power they speak treason:
 Let me, thy Afs, be onely wise
 To carry, not search, mysteries.
 Who carries thee is by thee led;
 Who argues follows his own head.
 To check bad motions, keep me still
 Amongst the dead, where thriving ill,
 Without his brags and conquests, lies,

And truth, oppress'd here, gets the prize.
At all times, whatsoe'r I do
Let me not fail to question, who
Shares in the act, and puts me to't?
And if not thou, let not me do't.
Above all, make me love the poor,
Those burthens to the rich man's door ;
Let me admire those, and be kinde
To low estates and a low minde.
If the world offers to me nought,
That by thy book must not be fought,
Or, though it should be lawful, may
Prove not expedient for thy way,
To shun that peril let thy grace
Prevail with me to shun the place ;
Let me be wise to please thee still,
And let men call me what they will.

When thus thy milde, instructing hand
Findes thy poor foal at thy command,
When he from wilde is become wise,
And flights that most, which men most prize ;
When all things here to thistles turn
Pricking his lips, till he doth mourn
And hang the head, sighing for those
Pastures of life, where the Lamb goes :
O then, just then ! break or untye
These bonds, this sad captivity,
This leaden state which men miscale
Being and life, but is dead thrall.
And when, O God ! the Ass is free,
In a state known to none but thee,
O let him by his Lord be led
To living springs, and 'there be fed,
Where light, joy, health, and perfect peace

Shut out all pain and each disease ;
 Where death and frailty are forgotten
 And bones rejoyce, which once were broken !

The hidden Treasure.

S. Matt. 13. 44.

What can the man do that succeeds the King?
 Even what was done before, and no new thing.*

Who shews me but one grain of sincere light ?

False stars and fire-drakes, and deceits of night,
 Set forth to fool and foil thee, do not boast ;
 Such Coal-flames shew but Kitchin-rooms at most.
 And those I saw search'd through ; yea those and all,
 That these three thousand years time did let fall
 To blinde the eyes of lookers-back, and I
 Now all is done, finde all is vanity.
 Those secret searches which afflict the wise,
 Paths that are hidden from the Vultur's eyes,
 I saw at distance, and where grows that fruit
 Which others onely grope for and dispute.

The world's lov'd wisdom, for the world's friends think

There is none else, did not the dreadful brink
 And precipice it leads to bid me flie
 None could with more advantage use than I.

Man's favourite sins, those tainting appetites,
 Which nature breeds, and some fine clay invites,

* Ecclesiastes, chap. 2. 12.

With all their soft, kinde arts and easie strains,
 Which strongly operate, though without pains,
 Did not a greater beauty rule mine eyes,
 None would more dote on, nor so soon entice.
 But since these sweets are sowre and poyson'd here,
 Where the impure seeds flourish all the year,
 And private Tapers will but help to stray
 Ev'n those, who by them would finde out the day,
 I'll seal my eyes up, and to thy commands
 Submit my wilde heart, and restrain my hands ;
 I will do nothing, nothing know, nor see
 But what thou bidst, and shew'st, and teachest me.
 Look what thou gav'st ; all that I do restore,
 But for one thing, thou purchas'd once before.

Childe-hood.

Cannot reach it ; and my striving eye
 Dazles at it, as at eternity.

Were now that Chronicle alive,
 Those white designs which children drive,

And the thoughts of each harmless hour,
 With their content too in my pow'r,
 Quickly would I make my path even,
 And by meer playing go to Heaven.

Why should men love
 A Wolf, more than a Lamb or Dove ?
 Or choose hell-fire and brimstone streams
 Before bright-stars and God's own beams ?
 Who kisseth thorns will hurt his face,
 But flowers do both refresh and grace ;

And sweetly living (fie on men!)
Are, when dead, medicinal then.
If seeing much should make staid eyes,
And long experience should make wise ;
Since all that age doth teach is ill,
Why should I not love childe-hood still ?
Why, if I see a rock or shelf,
Shall I from thence cast down my self,
Or by complying with the world,
From the same precipice be hurl'd ?
Those observations are but foul,
Which make me wise to lose my soul.

And yet the Practice worldlings call
Business and weighty action all,
Checking the poor childe for his play,
But gravely cast themselves away.

Dear, harmless age ! the short, swift span
Where weeping virtue parts with man ;
Where love without lust dwells, and bends
What way we please without self-ends.

An age of mysteries ! which he Must live twice that would God's face see ;
Which Angels guard, and with it play,
Angels ! which foul men drive away.

How do I study now, and scan
Thee more than ere I studyed man,
And onely see through a long night
Thy edges and thy bordering light !
O for thy Center and mid-day !
For sure that is the narrow way!

The Night.

John 3. 2.

Hrough that pure Virgin-sprine,
That sacred vail drawn o'er thy glorious noon,
That men might look and live, as Glo-
worms shine,
And face the Moon,
Wife Nicodemus saw such light
As made him know his God by night.

Most blest believer he!
Who in that land of darkness and blinde eyes
Thy long expected healing wings could see,
When thou didst rise;
And, what can never more be done,
Did at mid-night speak with the Sun!

O who will tell me, where
He found thee at that dead and silent hour?
What hallow'd solitary ground did bear
So rare a flower;
Within whose sacred leaves did lie
The fulness of the Deity?

No mercy-seat of gold,
No dead and dusty Cherub, nor carved stone,
But his own living works, did my Lord hold
And lodge alone;

Where trees and herbs did watch and peep
And wonder, while the Jews did sleep.

Dear night! this world's defeat;
The stop to busie fools; care's check and curb;
The day of Spirits; my foul's calm retreat
Which none disturb!
*Christs progress, and his prayer time;
The hours to which high Heaven doth chime.

God's silent, searching flight:
When my Lord's head is filled with dew, and all
His locks are wet with the clear drops of night;
His still, soft call;
His knocking time; The foul's dumb watch,
When spirits their Fair Kindred catch.

Were all my loud, evil days
Calm and unhaunted as is thy dark Tent,
Whose peace but by some Angel's wing or voice
Is seldom rent;
Then I in Heaven all the long year
Would keep, and never wander here.

But living where the Sun
Doth all things wake, and where all mix and tyre
Themselves and others, I consent and run
To ev'ry myre;
And by this world's ill guiding light,
Erre more than I can do by night.

There is in God, some fay,
A deep, but dazzling darknes; As men here

* Mark, chap. 1. 35. S. Luke, chap. 21. 37.

Say it is late and dusky, because they

See not all clear.

O for that night ! where I in Him

Might live invisible and dim !

Abels blood.

Ad, purple well ! whose bubbling eye
Did first against a Murth'rer cry ;
Whose streams still vocal, still complain
Of bloody Cain ;

And now at evening are as red
As in the morning when first shed.

If single thou,

Though single voices are but low,
Could'st such a shrill and long cry rear
As speaks still in thy maker's ear,
What thunders shall those men arraign
Who cannot count those they have slain,
Who bath not in a shallow flood,
But in a deep, wide sea of blood ?

A sea, whose lowd waves cannot sleep,
But Deep still calleth upon deep :

Whose urgent sound, like unto that
Of many waters, beateth at

The everlasting doors above,

Where souls behinde the altar move,

And with one strong, incessant cry

Inquire How long ? of the most High ?

Almighty Judge !

At whose just laws no just men grudge ;

Whose blessed, sweet commands do pour

Comforts and joys, and hopes each hour
 On those that keep them ; O accept
 Of his vow'd heart, whom thou hast kept
 From bloody men ! and grant, I may
 That sworn memorial duly pay
 To thy bright arm, which was my light
 And leader through thick death and night !

Aye may that flood,
 That proudly spilt and despis'd blood,
 Speechless and calm as Infants sleep !
 Or if it watch, forgive and weep
 For those that spilt it ! May no cries
 From the low earth to Heaven rise,
 But what like his, whose blood peace brings,
 Shall when they rise, speake better things
 Than Abel's doth ! may Abel be Still single heard, while these agree
 With his milde blood in voice and will,
Who pray'd for those that did him kill !

Righteousness.

Air, solitary path ! Whose blessed shades
 The old, white Prophets planted first and drest ;
 Leaving for us, whose goodness quickly
 fades,

A shelter all the way, and bowers to rest ;

Who is the man that walks in thee ? who loves
 Heav'n's secret solitude, those fair abodes,

Where turtles build, and careless sparrows move,
Without to morrow's evils and future loads ?

Who hath the upright heart, the single eye,
The clean, pure hand, which never meddled pitch ?
Who sees Invisibles, and doth comply
With hidden treasures that make truly rich ?

He that doth seek and love
The things above,
Whose spirit ever poor is meek and low ;
Who simple still and wise,
Still homewards flies,
Quick to advance, and to retreat most slow.

Whose acts, words and pretence
Have all one sense,
One aim and end ; who walks not by his sight :
Whose eyes are both put out,
And goes about
Guided by faith, not by exterior light.

Who spills no blood, nor spreads
Thorns in the beds
Of the distressed, hastening their overthrow ;
Making the time they had
Bitter and sad,
Like Chronic pains, which surely kill, though slow.

Who knows earth nothing hath Worth love or wrath,
But in his hope and Rock is ever glad.
Who seeks and follows peace,
When with the ease
And health of conscience it is to be had.

Who bears his cross with joy,
 And doth employ
 His heart and tongue in prayers for his foes ;
 Who lends not to be paid,
 And gives full aid
 Without that bribe which Ufurers impose.

Who never looks on man
 Fearful and wan,
 But firmly trusts in God ; the great man's measure
 Though high and haughty must
 Be ta'en in dust ;
 But the good man is God's peculiar treasure.

Who doth thus, and doth not
 These good deeds blot
 With bad, or with neglect ; and heaps not wrath
 By secret filth, nor feeds
 Some snake, or weeds,
 Cheating himself ; That man walks in this path.

Anguish.

MY God and King ! to thee
 I bow my knee ;
 I bow my troubled soul, and greet
 With my foul heart thy holy feet.
 Cast it, or tread it ! It shall do
 Even what thou wilt, and praise thee too.

My God, could I weep blood,
 Gladly I would ;

Or if thou wilt give me that Art,
Which through the eyes pours out the heart,
I will exhaust it all, and make
My self all tears, a weeping lake.

O! 'tis an easie thing
To write and sing;
But to write true, unfeigned verse
Is very hard! O God, disperse
These weights, and give my spirit leave
To act as well as to conceive!

O my God, hear my cry;
Or let me dye! —————

Tears.

When my God, my glory, brings
His white and holy train
Unto those clear and living Springs
Where comes no stain!

Where all is light, and flowers, and fruit,
And joy, and rest,
Make me amongst them, 'tis my suit!
The last one and the least.

And when they all are fed, and have
Drunk of thy living stream,
Bid thy poor Afs, with tears I crave,
Drink after them.

Thy love claims higheſt thanks, my fin
 The loweſt pitch :
 But if he pays, who loves much, then
 Thou haſt made beggers rich.

Jacobs Pillow, and Pillar.

See the Temple in thy Pillar reared,
 And that dread glory which thy children
 feared,
 In milde, clear viſions, without a frown,
 Unto thy folitary ſelf is ſhown.
 'Tis number makes a Schiſm : throngs are rude,
 And God himſelf dyed by the multitude.
 This made him put on clouds, and fire, and ſmoke ;
 Hence He in thunder to thy Off-ſpring ſpoke.
 The ſmall, ſtill voice at ſome low Cottage knocks,
 But a ſtrong wind muſt break thy lofty rocks.

The firſt true worſhip of the world's great King
 From private and ſelected hearts did ſpring ;
 But He moſt willing to ſave all mankinde,
 Inlarg'd that light, and to the bad was kinde.
 Hence Catholick or Universal came
 A moſt fair notion, but a very name.
 For this rich Pearl, like ſome more common ſtone,
 When once made publique, is eſteem'd by none.
 Man flights his Maker when familiar grown,
 And ſets up laws to pull his honor down.
 This God foreſaw : And when ſlain by the crowd
 Under that ſtately and myſterious cloud
 Which his death ſcatter'd, He foretold the place

And form to serve Him in should be true grace,
And the meek heart; not in a Mount, nor at
Jerusalem, with blood of beasts and fat.
A heart is that dread place, that awfull Cell,
That secret Ark, where the milde Dove doth dwell,
When the proud waters rage: when Heathens rule
By God's permission, and man turns a Mule,
This litle Gosben, in the midst of night,
And Satan's seat, in all her Coasts hath light;
Yea Bethel shall have Tithes, faith Israel's stone,
And vows and visions, though her foes crye, None.
Thus is the solemn temple sunk agen
Into a Pillar, and conceal'd from men.
And glory be to his eternal Name,
Who is contented that this holy flame
Shall lodge in such a narrow pit, till He
With His strong arm turns our captivity!

But blessed Jacob, though thy sad distress
Was just the same with ours, and nothing less;
For thou a brother, and blood-thirsty too,
Didst flye, *whose children wrought thy children's wo:
Yet thou in all thy solitude and grief,
On stones didst sleep, and found'st but cold relief;
Thou from the Day-star a long way didst stand,
And all that distance was Law and command.
But we a healing Sun by day and night,
Have our sure Guardian, and our leading light.
What thou didst hope for and believe we finde
And feel, a friend most ready, sure and kinde.
Thy pillow was but type and shade at best,
But we the substance have, and on Him rest.

The Agreement.

Wrote it down. But one, that saw
 And envied that Record, did since
 Such a mist over my minde draw,
 It quite forgot that purpos'd glimpse.
 I read it fadly oft, but still
 Simply believ'd 'twas not my Quill.

At length my life's kinde Angel came,
 And with his bright and busie wing
 Scatt'ring that cloud shewd me the flame,
 Which strait like Morning-stars did sing,
 And shine, and point me to a place,
 Which all the year sees the Sun's face.

O beamy book ! O my mid-day,
 Exterminating fears and night !
 The mount, whose white Ascendents may
 Be in conjunction with true light !
 My thoughts, when towards thee they move,
 Glitter and kindle with thy love.

Thou art the oyl and the wine-house ;
 Thine are the present healing leaves,
 Blown from the tree of life to us
 By His breath whom my dead heart heaves.
 Each page of thine hath true life in't,
 And God's bright minde exprest in print.

Most modern books are blots on thee,
 Their doctrine chaff and windy fits,

Darken'd along, as their scribes be,
 With those foul storms, when they were writ;
 While the man's zeal lays out and blends
 Onely self-worship and self-ends.

Thou art the faithful, pearly rock,
 The Hive of beamy, living lights,
 Ever the same, whose diffus'd stock
 Entire still wears out blackest nights.
 Thy lines are rays the true Sun sheds;
 Thy leaves are healing wings he spreads.

For until thou didst comfort me
 I had not one poor word to say:
 Thick busie clouds did multiply,
 And said I was no childe of day;
 They said, my own hands did remove
 That candle given me from above.

O God! I know and do confess
 My sins are great and still prevail,
 (Most heynous sins and numberless!)
 But thy Compassions cannot fail.
 If thy sure mercies can be broken,
 Then all is true my foes have spoken.

But while time runs, and after it
 Eternity which never ends,
 Quite through them both, still infinite,
 Thy Covenant by Christ extends;
 No sins of frailty, nor of youth,
 Can foil his merits, and thy truth.

And this I hourly finde, for thou
 Dost still renew, and purge and heal:

Thy care and love, which joyntly flow,
 New Cordials, new Cathartics deal.
 But were I once cast off by thee,
 I know, my God! this would not be.

Wherefore with tears, tears by thee sent,
 I beg my faith may never fail!
 And when in death my speech is spent,
 O let that silence then prevail!
 O chafe in that cold calm my foes,
 And hear my heart's last private throes!

So thou, who didst the work begin,
 For I till drawn came not to thee*,
 Wilt finish it, and by no fin
 Will thy free mercies hindred be.
 For which, O God, I onely can
 Bless thee, and blame unthankful man.

The day of Judgement.

Day of life, of light, of love!
 The onely day dealt from above!
 A day so fresh, so bright, so brave
 Twill shew us each forgotten grave,
 And make the dead, like flowers, arise
 Youthful and fair to see new skies.
 All other days, compar'd to thee,
 Are but light's weak minority;
 They are but veils, and Cyphers drawn
 Like Clouds, before thy glorious dawn.

* St John, chap. 6. ver. 44. 65.

O come! arise! shine! do not stay,

Dearly lov'd day!

The fields are long since white, and I

With earnest groans for freedom cry;

My fellow creatures too say, Come!

And stones, though speechless, are not dumb.

When shall we hear that glorious voice

Of life and joys?

That voice, which to each secret bed

Of my Lord's dead,

Shall bring true day, and make dust see,

The way to immortality?

When shall those first white Pilgrims rise,

Whose holy, happy Histories,

Because they sleep so long, some men

Count but the blots of a vain pen?

Dear Lord! make haste!

Sin every day commits more waste;

And thy old enemy, which knows

His time is short, more raging grows.

Nor moan I onely, though profuse,

Thy Creature's bondage and abuse;

But what is highest sin and shame,

The vile despight done to thy name;

The forgeries, which impious wit

And power force on Holy Writ,

With all detestable designs,

That may dishonor those pure lines.

O God! though mercy be in thee

The greatest attribute we see,

And the most needful for our sins;

Yet, when thy mercy nothing wins

But meer disdain, let not man say

Thy arm doth sleep; but write this day

Thy judging one : Descend, descend !
 Make all things new, and without end !

Pſalm 65.

Ion's true, glorious God ! on thee
 Praise waits in all humility.
 All flesh shall unto thee repair,
 To thee, O thou that hearest prayer !

But sinful words and works still spread
 And over-run my heart and head ;
 Transgressions make me foul each day ;
 O purge them, purge them all away !

Happy is he, whom thou wilt choose
 To serve thee in thy blessed house !
 Who in thy holy Temple dwells,
 And fill'd with joy thy goodness tells !
 King of Salvation ! by strange things
 And terrible Thy Justice brings
 Man to his duty. Thou alone
 Art the worlds hope, and but thee, none.
 Sailors that flote on flowing seas
 Stand firm by thee, and have sure peace.
 Thou still'ſt the loud waves, when most wild,
 And mak'ſt the raging people mild.
 Thy arm did first the mountains lay,
 And girds their rocky heads this day.
 The most remote, who know not thee,
 At thy great works astonish'd be.

The outgoings of the Even and Dawn,
 In Antiphones sing to thy Name :

Thou visit'st the low earth, and then
Water'st it for the sons of men;
Thy upper river, which abounds
With fertil streams, makes rich all grounds;
And by thy mercies still supplied
The sower doth his bread provide.
Thou water'st every ridge of land,
And settlest with thy secret hand
The furrows of it; then thy warm
And opening showers, restrain'd from harm,
Softens the mould, while all unseen
The blade grows up alive and green.
The year is with thy goodness crown'd,
And all thy paths drop fatness round;
They drop upon the wilderness,
For thou dost even the deserts bless,
And hills all full of springing pride,
Wear fresh adornments on each side.
The fruitful flocks fill every Dale,
And purling Corn doth cloath the Vale;
They shout for joy, and joyntly sing,
Glory to the eternal King!

The Throne.

Revel. chap. 20. ver. 11.

When with these eyes, clos'd now by thee,
But then restor'd,
The great and white throne I shall see
Of my dread Lord:
And lowly kneeling, for the most

Still then must kneel,
 Shall look on him, at whose high cost
 Unseen such joys I feel.

What ever arguments or skill
 Wife heads shall use,
 Tears onely and my blushes still
 I will produce.
 And should those speechless beggars fail,
 Which oft have won,
 Then taught by thee I will prevail,
 And say, Thy will be done!

Death.

 Hough since thy first sad entrance by Just Abel's blood,
 'Tis now six thousand years well nigh,
 And still thy sovereignty holds good ;
 Yet by none art thou understood.

We talk and name thee with much ease,
 As a tried thing,
 And every one can slight his lease,
 As if it ended in a Spring,
 Which shades and bowers doth rent-free bring.

To thy dark land these heedless go.
 But there was One,
 Who search'd it quite through to and fro,
 And then, returning like the Sun,
 Discover'd all that there is done.

And since his death we throughly see

All thy dark way ;

Thy shades but thin and narrow be,

Which his first looks will quickly fray :

Mists make but triumphs for the day.

As harmless violets, which give

Their virtues here

For salves and syrups while they live,

Do after calmly disappear,

And neither grieve, repine, nor fear :

So dye his servants ; and as sure

Shall they revive.

Then let not dust your eyes obscure,

But lift them up, where still alive,

Though fled from you, their spirits hive.

The Feast.

Come away,

Make no delay,

Come while my heart is clean and

While Faith and Grace [steady!

Adorn the place,

Making dust and ashes ready !

No blifs here lent

Is permanent,

Such triumphs poor flesh cannot merit ;

Short sips and fights

Endear delights :

Who seeks for more he would inherit.

Come then, true bread,
 Quickning the dead,
 Whose eater shall not, cannot dye !
 Come, antedate
 On me that state,
 Which brings poor dust the victory.

Aye victory,
 Which from thine eye
 Breaks as the day doth from the east,
 When the spilt dew
 Like tears doth shew
 The sad world wept to be releast.

Spring up, O wine,
 And springing shine
 With some glad message from his heart,
 Who did, when slain,
 These means ordain
 For me to have in Him a part !

Such a sure part
 In his blest heart,
 The well where living waters spring,
 That with it fed
 Poor dust, though dead,
 Shall rise again, and live, and sing.

O drink and bread,
 Which strikes death dead,
 The food of man's immortal being !
 Under veils here
 Thou art my chear,
 Present and sure without my seeing.

How dost thou flye
And search and pry
Through all my parts, and like a quick
And knowing lamp
Hunt out each damp,
Whose shadow makes me sad or sick !

O what high joys !
The Turtle's voice
And songs I hear ! O quickning flowers
Of my Lord's blood,
You make rocks bud,
And crown dry hills with wells and flowers !

For this true ease
This healing peace,
For this brief taste of living glory,
My soul and all,
Kneel down and fall,
And sing his sad victorious story !

O thorny crown
More soft than down !
O painful Cross my bed of rest !
O spear, the key
Opening the way !
O thy worst state my onely best !

O all thy griefs
Are my reliefs,
As all my sins thy sorrows were !
And what can I,
To this reply ?
What, O God ! but a silent tear ?

Some toil and fow
 That wealth may flow,
 And dress this earth for next year's meat :
 But let me heed
 Why thou didst,
 And what in the next world to eat.

Revel. chap. 19. ver. 9.

Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage Supper of the Lamb !

The Obsequies.

ince dying for me, thou didst crave no more
 Than common pay,
 Some few true tears, and those shed for
 My own ill way ;
 With a cheap, plain remembrance still
 Of thy sad death,
 Because forgetfulness would kill
 Even life's own breath :
 I were most foolish and unkinde
 In my own sense,
 Should I not ever bear in minde,
 If not thy mighty love, my own defense.
 Therefore those loose delights and lusts, which here
 Men call good chear,
 I will, close girt and tyed,
 For mourning sack-cloth wear all mortified.

Not but that mourners too can have
 Rich weeds and shrouds ;
 For some wore White ev'n in thy grave,

And Joy, like light, shines oft in clouds :
 But thou, who didst man's whole life earn,
 Dost so invite and woo me still,
 That to be merry I want skill,
 And time to learn.
 Besides, those Kerchiefs sometimes shed
 To make me brave,
 I cannot finde, but where thy head
 Was once laid for me in thy grave.
 Thy grave! To which my thoughts shall move
 Like Bees in storms unto their Hive ;
 That from the murd'ring world's false love
 Thy death may keep my soul alive.

The Water-fall.

With what deep murmurs, through time's silent stealth.
 Doth thy transparent, cool and watry wealth
 Here flowing fall,
 And chide and call,
 As if his liquid, loose Retinue staid
 Lingring, and were of this steep place afraid ;
 The common pass,
 Where, clear as glass,
 All must descend
 Not to an end,
 But quickned by this deep and rocky grave,
 Rise to a longer course more bright and brave.

Dear stream ! dear bank ! where often I
 Have fate, and pleas'd my pensive eye ;

Why, since each drop of thy quick store
Runs thither whence it flow'd before,
Should poor souls fear a shade or night,
Who came sure from a sea of light?
Or since those drops are all sent back
So sure to thee that none doth lack,
Why should frail flesh doubt any more
That what God takes He'll not restore?

O useful Element and clear!
My sacred wash and cleanser here;
My first configner unto those
Fountains of life, where the Lamb goes!
What sublime truths, and wholesome themes,
Lodge in thy mystical, deep streams!
Such as dull man can never finde,
Unless that Spirit lead his minde,
Which first upon thy face did move
And hatch'd all with his quickning love.
As this loud brook's incessant fall
In streaming rings restagnates all,
Which reach by course the bank, and then
Are no more seen, just so pass men.
O my invifible estate,
My glorious liberty, still late!
Thou art the Channel my soul seeks,
Not this with Cataracts and Creeks.

Quickness.

Alse life ! a foil, and no more, when
 Wilt thou be gone ?
 Thou foul deception of all men,
 That would not have the true come on ?

Thou art a Moon-like toil ; a blinde
 Self-posing state ;
 A dark contest of waves and winde ;
 A meer tempestuous debate.

Life is a fix'd, discerning light,
 A knowing Joy ;
 No chance, or fit : but ever bright
 And calm and full, yet doth not cloy.

'Tis such a blisful thing, that still
 Doth vivifie,
 And shine and smile, and hath the skill
 To please without Eternity.

Thou art a toylsom Mole, or less
 A moving mist.
 But life is, what none can expres,
A quickness, which my God hath kist.

The Wreath.

Ince I in storms us'd most to be,
 And seldom yielded flowers,
 How shall I get a wreath for thee
 From those rude, barren hours ?

The softer dressings of the Spring,
 Or Summer's later store,
 I will not for thy temples bring,
 Which Thorns, not Roses, wore.

But a twin'd wreath of grief and praise,
 Praise foil'd with tears, and tears again
 Shining with joy, like dewy days,
 This day I bring for all thy pain;
 Thy causeless pain! and, sad as death,
 Which sadness breeds in the most vain,
 (O not in vain!) now beg thy breath,
 Thy quickning breath, which gladly bears
 Through saddest clouds to that glad place,
 Where cloudless Quires sing without tears,
 Sing thy just praise, and see thy face.

The Queer.

Tell me whence that joy doth spring,
 Whose diet is divine and fair,
 Which wears heaven like a bridal ring,
 And tramples on doubts and despair?

Whose Eastern traffique deals in bright
 And boundless Empyrean themes,
 Mountains of spice, Day-stars and light,
 Green trees of life, and living streams?

Tell me, O tell, who did thee bring,
 And here without my knowledge plac'd;
 Till thou didst grow and get a wing,
 A wing with eyes, and eyes that taste?

Sure, holyness the Magnet is,
And Love the Lure, that woos thee down :
Which makes the high transcendent bliss
Of knowing thee, so rarely known !

The Book.

Ternal God ! maker of all
That have liv'd here since the man's fall !
The Rock of ages ! in whose shade
They live unseen, when here they fade !

Thou knew'st this papyr, when it was
Meer seed, and after that but grafs ;
Before 'twas dress'd or spun, and when
Made linen, who did wear it then :
What were their lives, their thoughts and deeds,
Whether good corn, or fruitless weeds.

Thou knew'st this Tree, when a green shade
Cover'd it since a Cover made,
And where it flourish'd, grew and spread,
As if it never should be dead.

Thou knew'st this harmless beast, when he Did live and feed by thy decree
On each green thing ; then slept well fed
Cloath'd with this skin, which now lies spread
A Covering o're this aged book,
Which makes me wisely weep, and look
On my own dust ; meer dust it is,
But not so dry and clean as this.
Thou knew'st and saw'st them all, and though
Now scatter'd thus, dost know them so.

O knowing, glorious Spirit ! when
 Thou shalt restore trees, beasts and men,
 When thou shalt make all new again,
 Destroying onely death and pain,
 Give him amongst thy works a place,
 Who in them lov'd and fought thy face !

To the Holy Bible.

Book ! life's guide ! how shall we part,
 And thou so long seiz'd of my heart ?
 Take this last kifs ; and let me weep
 True thanks to thee before I sleep.

Thou wert the first put in my hand,
 When yet I could not understand,
 And daily didst my yong eyes lead
 To letters, till I learnt to read.
 But as rash youths, when once grown strong,
 Flye from their Nurfes to the throng,
 Where they new Consorts choose, and stick
 To those till either hurt or sick ;
 So with that first light gain'd from thee
 Ran I in chafe of vanity,
 Cryed drofs for gold, and never thought
 My first cheap Book had all I fought.
 Long reign'd this vogue ; and thou cast by
 With meek, dumb looks didst woo mine eye,
 And oft left open would'st convey
 A sudden and most searching ray
 Into my soul, with whose quick touch
 Refining still I strugled much.
 By this milde art of love at length

Thou overcam'st my sinful strength,
 And having brought me home, didst there
 Shew me that pearl I sought elsewhere.
 Gladness, and peace, and hope, and love,
 The secret favors of the Dove ;
 Her quickning kindness, smiles and kisses,
 Exalted pleasures, crowning blisses,
 Fruition, union, glory, life
 Thou didst lead to, and still all strife.
 Living, thou wert my soul's sure ease,
 And dying mak'st me go in peace :
 Thy next Effects no tongue can tell ;
 Farewel, O book of God ! farewel !

S. Luke chap. 2. ver. 14.

Glory be to God in the highest, and on Earth peace, good will towards men.

L'Envoy.

The new world's new quickning Sun !
 Ever the same, and never done !
 The seers of whose sacred light
 Shall all be drest in shining white,
 And made conformable to his
 Immortal shape, who wrought their bliss ;
 Arise, arise !
 And like old cloaths fold up these skies,
 This long worn veyl : then shine and spread
 Thy own bright self over each head,
 And through thy creatures pierce and pass,
 Till all becomes thy cloudless glass,
 Transparent as the purest day

And without blemish or decay,
Fixt by thy spirit to a state
For evermore immaculate ;
A state fit for the sight of thy
Immediate, pure and unveil'd eye,
A state agreeing with thy minde,
A state thy birth and death design'd :
A state for which thy creatures all
Travel and groan, and look and call.
O seeing thou hast paid our score,
Why should the curse reign any more?
But since thy number is as yet
Unfinish'd, we shall gladly fit
Till all be ready, that the train
May fully fit thy glorious reign.
Onely, let not our haters brag
Thy seamdless coat is grown a rag,
Or that thy truth was not here known,
Because we forc'd thy judgements down.
Dry up their arms who vex thy spouse,
And take the glory of thy house
To deck their own ; then give thy faints
That faithful zeal, which neither faints,
Nor wildly burns, but meekly still
Dares own the truth, and shew the ill.
Frustrate those cancerous, close arts,
Which cause solution in all parts,
And strike them dumb, who for meer words
Wound thy beloved more than swords.
Dear Lord, do this ! and then let grace
Descend, and hallow all the place.
Incline each hard heart to do good,
And cement us with thy Son's blood ;
That like true sheep, all in one fold

We may be fed, and one minde hold.
 Give watchful spirits to our guides ;
 For sin like water hourly glides
 By each man's door, and quickly will Turn in, if not obstructed still.
 Therefore write in their hearts thy law,
 And let these long, sharp judgements awe
 Their very thoughts, that by their clear
 And holy lives mercy may here
 Sit regent yet, and blessings flow
 As fast as persecutions now.
 So shall we know in war and peace
 Thy service to be our sole ease,
 With prostrate souls adoring thee,
 Who turn'd our sad captivity !

S. Clemens apud Basil :

Ζῆ ὁ Θεός, καὶ ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον.

THALIA REDIVIVA.

PIOUS THOUGHTS AND EJACULATIONS.

PART III.

Pious Thoughts and Ejaculations.

From a volume entitled Thalia Rediviva.

To his Books.

Right books ! the perspectives to our weak sights,
The clear projections of discerning lights,
Burning and shining thoughts, man's posthume day,

The track of fled souls, and their milkie way,
The dead alive and busie, the still voice
Of enlarged spirits, kind Heaven's white decoys !
Who lives with you lives like those knowing flowers,
Which in commerce with light spend all their hours ;
Which shut to clouds, and shadows nicely shun,
But with glad haste unveil to kiss the Sun.
Beneath you all is dark and a dead night,
Which who so lives in wants both health and fight.

By sucking you the wise, like bees, do grow
Healing and rich, though this they do most slow,
Because most choicely ; for as great a store
Have we of Books as bees of herbs, or more :
And the great task to try, then know, the good,

To discern weeds, and judge of wholesome food,
 Is a rare scant performance. For man dyes
 Oft ere 'tis done, while the bee feeds and flies.
 But you were all choice flowers ; all set and dressed
 By old sage florists, who well knew the best :
 And I amidst you all am turned a weed,
 Not wanting knowledge, but for want of heed.
 Then thank thyself, wild fool, that would'ſt not be Content to know,—what was too much for thee !

Looking back.

Air, shining mountains of my pilgrimage
 And flowery vales, whose flowers were stars !
 The days and nights of my first happy age,
 An age without distaste or wars !
 When I by thought ascend your sunny heads,
 And mind those sacred midnight lights
 By which I walked, when curtained rooms and beds
 Confined or sealed up other's sights ;
 O then, how bright, and quick a light
 Doth brush my heart and scatter night !
 Chasing that shade, which my sins made,
 While I so spring, as if I could not fade.
 How brave a prospect is a traversed plain,
 Where flowers and Palms refresh the eye !
 And days well spent like the glad East remain,
 Whose morning glories cannot dye.

The Shower.

 Waters above ! Eternal springs !
 The dew that silvers the Dove's wings !
 O welcome, welcome to the sad !
 Give dry dust drink, drink that makes glad.
 Many fair Evenings, many flowers
 Sweetened with rich and gentle showers,
 Have I enjoyed, and down have run
 Many a fine and shining Sun ;
 But never, till this happy hour,
 Was blest with such an Evening shower !

Discipline.

 Air Prince of life ! Light's living Well !
 Who hast the keys of death and Hell ;
 If the mule man despise thy day,
 Put chains of Darkneſs in his way.
 Teach him how deep, how various are
 The counſels of thy love and care.
 When acts of grace and a long peace,
 Breed but rebellion, and diſpleaſe,
 Then give him his own way and will,
 Where lawleſs he may run, until
 His own choice hurts him, and the ſting
 Of his foul ſin full ſorrows bring.
 If Heaven and Angels, hopes and mirth,
 Pleaſe not the mole ſo much as Earth,
 Give him his mine to dig, or dwell,
 And one ſad ſcheme of hideous Hell.

The Eclipse.

Hither, O whither didst thou fly?
When did I grieve thy holy eye?
When thou didst mourn to see me lost,
And all thy care and counsels crost.

O do not grieve, whereer thou art!
Thy grief is an undoing smart,
Which doth not only pain, but break
My heart, and makes me blush to speak.
Thy anger I could kiss, and will;
But O thy grief, thy grief, doth kill!

Affliction.

Come, and welcome! Come, refine!
For Moors, if washed by thee, will shine.
Man blossoms at thy touch, and he,
When thou drawst blood, is thy rose-tree.

Crosses make straight his crooked ways,
And clouds but cool his dog-star days;
Diseases too, when by thee blessed,
Are both restoratives and rest.

Flowers that in sunshine riot still,
Dye scorched and sapless; though storms kill.
The fall is fair even to desire
Where in their sweetness all expire.
O come, pour on! what calms can be
So fair as storms that appease thee?

Retirement.

Rest fields and woods! the Earth's fair face!
 God's footstool! and man's dwelling place!
 I ask not why the first believer*
 Did love to be a country liver,

Who to secure pious content
 Did pitch by groves and wells his tent,
 Where he might view the boundless skie,
 And all those glorious lights on high,
 With flying meteors, mists, and showers,
 Subjected hills, trees, meads, and flowers,
 And every minute blest the King,
 And wise Creator of each thing?

I ask not why he did remove
 To happy Mamre's holy grove,
 Leaving the cities of the plain
 To Lot and his successful train?
 All various lusts in cities still
 Are found; they are the thrones of ill;
 The dismal sinks, where blood is spilled,
 Cages with much uncleanness filled.
 But rural shades are the sweet sense
 Of piety and innocence;
 They are the meek's calm region, where
 Angels descend and rule the sphere;
 Where Heaven lies leaguer, and the Dove
 Duely as dew comes from above.
 If Eden be on earth at all,
 'Tis that which we the Country call.

* Abraham.

The Revival.

Unfold ! unfold ! Take in His light,
Who makes thy cares more short than night.

The joyes which with His day-star rise
He deals to all but drowfie eyes ;
And, (what the men of this world mis))
Some drops and dews of future blifs.

Hark ! how the winds have changed their note !
And with warm whispers call thee out.
The frosts are past, the storms are gone,
And backward life at last comes on.
The lofty groves in exprefs joyes
Reply unto the turtle's voice ;
And here in dust and dirt, O here
The lilies of His love appear !

The Day spring.

Early, while yet the dark was gay
And gilt with stars, more trim than day,
Heaven's Lily, and the Earth's chaste Rose,
The green immortal BRANCH, arose,
And in a solitary place
Bowed to His Father His blest face.

If this calm season pleased my Prince,
Whose fulness no need could evince,
Why should not I, poor silly sheep,
His hours, as well as practice, keep ?

Not that his hand is tyed to these,
From whom time holds his transient lease;
But mornings new Creations are,
When men, all night saved by His care,
Are still revived; and well He may Expect them grateful with the day.
So for that first draught of His hand,
Which finished Heaven, and sea, and land,
The Sons of God their thanks did bring,
And all the morning stars did sing.
Besides, as His part heretofore
The firstlings were of all that bore,
So now each day from all He saves
Their soul's first thoughts and fruits He craves.
This makes Him daily shed and shower
His graces at this early hour;
Which both His care and kindness shew,
Cheering the good, quickening the slow.
As holy friends mourn at delay,
And think each minute an hour's stay,
So His divine and loving Dove
With longing throes doth heave and move,
And soare about us, while we sleep,
Sometimes quite through that lock doth peep,
And shine, but always without fail
Before the slow scene can unveil,
In new compassions breaks, like light,
And morning looks, which scatter night.
And wilt thou let thy creature be,
Where thou hast watched, asleep to thee?
Why to unwelcome loathed surprizes
Dost leave him, having left his vices?
Since these, if suffered, may again
Lead back the living to the slain.

The Nativity.

Written in the year 1656.

PEace! and to all the world! Sure One
And He the Prince of peace, hath none!
He travails to be born, and then
Is born to travail more again.

Poor Galilee, Thou can'st not be
The place for His nativity.
His restless mother's called away,
And not delivered till she pay.

A Tax! 'tis so still. We can see
The church thrive in her misery,
And, like her Head at Bethlehem, rise,
When she oppressed with troubles lies.
Rise?—Should all fall we cannot be
In more extremities than He.
Great Type of passions! Come what will,
Thy grief exceeds all copies still.
Thou cam'st from Heaven to Earth, that we Might go from earth to Heaven with Thee:
And though Thou found'st no welcome here,
Thou didst provide us mansions there.
A stable was thy Court, and when
Men turned to beasts, beasts would be men:
They were thy courtiers; others none;
And their poor manger was thy throne.
No swadling silks Thy limbs did fold,
Though Thou could'st turn Thy rags to gold.
No Rockers waited on Thy birth,

No cradles stirred, nor songs of mirth;
 But her chaste lap and sacred breast,
 Which lodged Thee first, did give Thee rest.

But stay! what light is that doth stream
 And drop here in a gilded beam?
 It is Thy star runs page, and brings
 Thy tributary Eastern Kings.
 Lord! grant some light to us; that we
 May find with them the way to Thee!
 Behold what mists eclipse the day!
 How dark it is! Shed down one ray,
 To guide us out of this dark night,
 And say once more, "Let there be light!"

The true Christmas.

 O, stick up ivie and the bays,
 And then restore the Heathen ways.
 Green will remind you of the Spring,
 Though this great day denies the thing;
 And mortifies the Earth, and all
 But your wild revels, and loose hall.
 Could you wear flowers, and roses strow
 Blushing upon your breast's warm snow,
 That very dress your lightness will
 Rebuke, and wither at the ill.
 The brightness of this day we owe
 Not unto music, masque, nor showe;
 Nor gallant furniture, nor plate,
 But to the manger's mean estate.
 His life while here, as well as birth,
 Was but a check to pomp and mirth;

And all man's greatness you may see
 Condemned by His humility.

Then leave your open house and noise,
 To welcome him with holy joys,
 And the poor shepherds' watchfulness;
 Whom light and hymns from Heaven did bless.
 What you abound with cast abroad
 To those that want, and ease your load.
 Who empties thus will bring more in;
 But riot is both loss and sin.
 Dress finely what comes not in fight,
 And then you keep your Christmas right!

The Request.

Thou who didst deny to me
 This world's adored felicity,
 And every big imperious lust,
 Which fools admire in sinful dust,

With those fine subtle twists that tye
 Their bundles of foul gallantry,—
 Keep still my weak eyes from the shine
 Of those gay things which are not Thine!
 And shut my ears against the noise
 Of wicked, though applauded, joys!
 For thou in any land hast store
 Of shades and coverts for Thy poor;
 Where from the busie dust and heat,
 As well as storms, they may retreat.
 A Rock or Bush are downy beds,
 When Thou art there, crowning their heads
 With secret blessings, or a tire

Made of the Comforter's live fire.
 And when thy goodness in the dress
 Of Anger, will not seem to bless,
 Yet dost Thou give them that rich rain,
 Which as it drops clears all again.

O what kind visits daily pass
 'Twixt Thy great Self and such poor grass!
 With what sweet looks doth Thy love shine
 On those low violets of Thine,
 While the tall Tulip is accurst,
 And Crowns Imperial dye with thirst!
 O give me still those secret meals,
 Those rare repasts which Thy love deals!
 Give me that joy which none can grieve,
 And which in all griefs doth relieve.
 This is the portion Thy child begs;
 Not that of rust, and rags, and dregs.

The World.

An any tell me what it is? Can you,
 That wind your thoughts into a Clue,
 To guide out others, while yourselves stay
 And hug the Sin? [in,
 I that so long in it have lived,
 That, if I might,
 In truth I would not be reprieved,
 Have neither fight
 Nor sense that knows
 These ebbs and flows;
 But since of all, all may be said,
 And likeliness doth but upbraid

And mock the truth, which still is lost
 In fine conceits, like streams in a sharp frost ;
 I will not strive, nor the rule break,
 Which doth give losers leave to speak.
 Then false and foul world, and unknown
 Even to thy own,
 Here I renounce thee, and resign
 Whatever thou canst say is thine.

Thou art not Truth ! for he that tries
 Shall find thee all deceit and lyes.
 Thou art not Friendship ! for in thee
 'Tis but the bait of policie ;
 Which like a Viper lodged in flowers,
 Its venom through that sweetness pours ;
 And when not so, then always 'tis
 A fading paint, the short-lived bliss
 Of air and humour, out and in,
 Like colours in a Dolphin's skin :
 But must not live beyond one day,
 Or for Convenience, then away.
 Thou art not Riches ! for that trash,
 Which one age hoards, the next doth wash,
 And so severely sweep away,
 That few remember where it lay.
 So rapid streams the wealthy land
 About them have at their command ;
 And shifting channels here restore,
 There break down, what they banked before.
 Thou art not Honour ! for those gay
 Feathers will wear and drop away ;
 And princes to some upstart line
 Give new ones, that are full as fine.
 Thou art not Pleasure ! For thy Rose

Upon a thorn doth still repose,
Which, if not cropt, will quickly shed,
But soon as cropt grows dull and dead.

Thou art the sand which fills one glass,
And then doth to another pass;
And could I put thee to a stay,
Thou art but dust! Then go thy way,
And leave me clean and bright, though poor;
Who stops thee doth but daub his floor;
And, swallow like, when he hath done,
To unknown dwellings must be gone.

Welcome, pure thoughts, and peaceful hours,
Enriched with sunshine and with showers!
Welcome fair hopes, and holy cares,
The not to be repented shares
Of time and business, the sure road
Unto my last and loved abode!

O supreme Bliss!

The circle, center, and abyss
Of blessings, never let me miss
Nor leave that path, which leads to thee,
Who art alone all things to me!
I hear, I see, all the long day
The noise and pomp of the "broad way."
I note their coarse and proud approaches,
Their silks, perfumes, and glittering coaches.
But in the "narrow way" to Thee
I observe only poverty,
And despised things; and all along
The ragged, mean, and humble throng
Are still on foot; and as they go
They sigh, and say, Their Lord went so!

Give me my staff then, as it stood
 When green and growing in the wood.
 The stones, which for the Altar served,
 Might not be smoothed nor finely carved.
 With this poor stick I'll pass the ford,
 As Jacob did ; And Thy dear word,
 As Thou hast dressed it, not as wit
 And depraved tastes have poison'd it,
 Shall in the passage be my meat,
 And none else shall thy servant eat.
 Thus, thus, and in no other sort,
 Will I set forth, though laughed at for't ;
 And leaving the wise world their way,
 Go through, though judged to go astray.

The Bee.

From fruitful beds and flowery borders,
 Parcelled to wasteful ranks and orders,
 Where state grasps more than plain truth
 needs,

And wholesome herbs are starved by weeds,
 To the wild woods I will be gone,
 And the coarse meals of great Saint John.

When truth and piety are missed
 Both in the Rulers and the Priest ;
 When pity is not cold, but dead,
 And the rich eat the poor like bread ;
 While factious heads, with open coile
 And force, first make, then share, the spoile ;
 To Horeb then Elias goes,
 And in the desert grows the rose.

Haile Chrystal fountaines and fresh shades,
Where no proud look invades,
No busie worldling hunts away
The sad Retirer all the day !
Haile, happy, harmlesse solitude !
Our sanctuary from the rude
And scornful world ; the calm recess
Of faith, and hope, and holiness !
Here something still like Eden looks ;
Honey in woods, Juleps in brooks :
And flowers, whose rich unrifled sweets
With a chaste kiss the cool dew greets,
When the toyls of the day are done,
And the tired world sets with the Sun.
Here flying winds, and flowing Wells,
Are the wise watchful hermit's bells ;
Their busie murmurs all the night
To praise or prayer do invite ;
And with an awful sound arrest,
And piously employ his breast.

When in the East the dawn doth blush,
Here cool fresh Spirits the air brush.
Herbs strait get up ; flowers peep and spread ;
Trees whisper praise, and bow the head :
Birds, from the shades of night released,
Look round about, then quit the nest,
And with united gladness sing
The glory of the morning's King.
The Hermit hears, and with meek voice
Offers his own up, and their, joyes :
Then prays that all the world might be
Blest with as sweet an unity.

If sudden storms the day invade,
 They flock about him to the shade,
 Where wisely they expect the end,
 Giving the tempest time to spend;
 And hard by shelters on some bough
 Hilarion's servant, the sage Crow.

O purer years of light and grace!
 Great is the difference, as the space,
 'Twixt you and us, who blindly run
 After false fires and leave the sun.
 Is not fair nature of herself
 Much richer than dull paint and pelf?
 And are not streams at the Spring head
 More sweet than in carved stone or lead.
 But fancy and some artist's tools
 Frame a religion for fools.

The truth, which once was plainly taught,
 With thorns and briars now is fraught.
 Some part is with bold fables spotted,
 Some by strange comments wildly blotted;
 And Discord, old corruption's crest,
 With blood and blame have stained the rest.
 So snow, which in its first descents
 A whiteness like pure Heaven presents,
 When touched by man is quickly soiled,
 And after trodden down and spoiled.

O lead me, where I may be free
 In truth and Spirit to serve Thee!
 Where undisturbed I may converse
 With thy great Self; and there rehearse
 Thy gifts with thanks; and from thy store,
 Who art all blessings, beg much more.

Give me the wisdom of the Bee,
And her unwearied industrie !
That from the wild gourds of these days,
I may extract health, and Thy praise,
Who canst turn darkness into light,
And in my weakness shew Thy might.

Suffer me not in any want
To seek refreshment from a plant
Thou didst not set ; since all must be Plucked up, whose growth is not from Thee.
'Tis not the garden, and the bowers,
Nor sense and forms, that give to flowers
Their wholesomeness ; but Thy good will,
Which truth and pureness purchase still.

Then since corrupt man hath driven hence
Thy kind and Saving influence,
And Balm is no more to be had
In all the coasts of Gilead ;
Go with me to the shade and cell,
Where Thy best servants once did dwell.
There let me know Thy will, and see
Exiled religion owned by Thee ;
For Thou canst turn dark grots to Halls,
And make hills blossom like the vales,
Decking their untill'd heads with flowers,
And fresh delights for all sad hours ;
Till from them, like a laden Bee,
I may fly home, and hive with Thee !

To Christian Religion.

Farewell thou true and tried Refection
 Of the still poor and meek Election !
 Farewell, Soul's joy, the quickening health
 Of Spirits, and their surest wealth !

Farewell, my morning Star, the bright
 And dawning looks of the true light !
 O blessed Shiner, tell me whither
 Thou wilt be gone, when night comes hither !
 A Seer that observed thee in
 Thy course, and watched the growth of Sin,
 Hath given his judgment, and foretold,
 That Westward hence thy course will hold ;
 And when the day with us is done,
 There fix and shine a glorious Sun.
 O hated shades and darkness ! when
 You have got here the sway again,
 And like unwholesome fogs withstood
 The light, and blasted all that's good,
 Who shall the happy shepherds be,
 To watch the next nativity
 Of Truth and brightness, and make way
 For the returning rising day ?
 O what year will bring back our bliss ?
 Or who shall live, when God doth this ?

Thou Rock of ages ! and the Rest
 Of all that for Thee are oppressed !
 Send down the Spirit of thy truth,
 That Spirit, which the tender youth,
 And first growths of Thy spouse did spread

Through all the world from one small head !
 Then if to blood we must resist,
 Let Thy mild Dove, and our High Priest,
 Help us, when man proves false, or frowns,
 To bear the Cross, and save our Crowns.
 O honour those that honour Thee !
 Make babes to still the Enemy !
 And teach an Infant of few days
 To perfect by his death thy praise !
 Let none defile what Thou didst wed,
 Nor tear the garland from her head !
 But chaste and cheerful let her dye,
 And precious in the Bridegroom's eye !
 So to Thy glory, and her praise,
 These last shall be her brightest days.

Revel. Chap. last. ver. 17.

" The Spirit and the Bride say Come."

Daphnis,

An Elegiac Eclogue, (on the death of the Rev'd Thomas Vaughan.)

The Interlocutors, Damon, Menalcas.

Damon.

What clouds, Menalcas, do oppress thy brow,
 Flowers in a sunshine never look so low ?
 Is Nisa still cold flint ? or have thy lambs
 Met with the fox by straying from their dams ?

Menalcas.

Ah, Damon, no ! my lambs are safe ; and she
 Is kind, and much more white than they can be.
 But what doth life when most serene afford
 Without a worm which gnaws her fairest gourd ?
 Our days of gladness are but short reliefs,
 Given to reserve us for enduring griefs :
 So smiling calms close tempests breed, which break
 Like spoilers out, and kill our flocks where weak.
 I heard last May, and May is still high Spring,
 The pleasant Philomel her vespers sing.
 The green wood glittered with the golden Sun,
 And all the West like silver shined ; not one
 Black cloud appeared ; no rags, no spot did stain
 The welkin's beauty ; nothing frowned like rain.
 But ere night came that scene of fine fights turned
 To fierce dark showers : the air with lightnings burned ;
 The wood's sweet Syren, rudely thus oppressed,
 Gave to the storm her weak and weary breast.
 I saw her next day on her last cold bed :
 And Daphnis so, just so is Daphnis, dead !

Damon.

So violets, so doth the primrose, fall,
 At once the Spring's pride, and its funeral.
 Such early sweets get off still in their prime,
 And stay not here to wear the foil of time ;
 While coarser flowers, which none would miss, if past,
 To scorching Summers and cold Autumns last.

Menalcas.

Souls need not time. The early forward things
 Are always fledged, and gladly use their wings.
 Or else great parts, when injured, quit the crowd,

To shine above still, not behind, the cloud.
And is't not just to leave those to the night
That madly hate and persecute the light?
Who, doubly dark, all negroes do exceed,
And inwardly are true black Moores indeed?

Damon.

The punishment still manifests the sin,
As outward signs shew the disease within.
While worth oppressed mounts to a nobler height,
And palm-like bravely overtops the weight.

So where swift Isca from our lofty hills
With loud farewells descends, and foaming fills
A wider channel, like some great port-vein
With large rich streams to feed the humble plain,
I saw an Oak, whose stately height and shade,
Projected far, a goodly shelter made;
And from the top with thick diffused boughs
In distant rounds grew like a wood nymph's house.
Here many garlands won at Roundel-lays
Old shepherds hung up in those happy days;
With knots and girdles, the dear spoils and drefs
Of such bright maids as did true lovers blefs.
And many times had old Amphion made
His beauteous flock acquainted with this shade;
His flock, whose fleeces were as smooth and white
As those the welkin shows in moonshine night.
Here, when the careless world did sleep, have I
In dark records and numbers nobly high
The visions of our black, but brightest, Bard
From old Amphion's mouth full often heard;
With all those plagues poor shepherds since have known,
And riddles more which future times must own:
While on his pipe young Hylas plaid, and made

Mufic as folemn as the fong and fhade.
 But the curft owner from the trembling top
 To the firm brink did all thofe branches lop;
 And in one hour what many years had bred,
 The pride and beauty of the plain, lay dead.
 The undone Swains in fad fongs mourned their lofs,
 While ftorms and cold winds did encrease the Crofs;
 But nature, which, like virtue, fcorns to yield,
 Brought new recruits and fuccours to the field;
 For by next Spring the checked fap waked from fleep,
 And upwards ftill to feel the Sun did creep;
 Till at thofe wounds the hated hewer made
 There fprang a thicker and a frefter fhade.

Menalcas.

So thrives afflicted truth, and fo the light
 When put out gains a value from the night.
 How glad are we, when but one twinkling ftar
 Peeps between clouds more black than is our tar:
 And Providence was kind, that ordered this
 To the brave fufferer fhould be folid blifs:
 Nor is it fo till this fhort life be done,
 But goes hence with him, and is ftill his Sun.

Damon.

Come, fhepherds, then, and with your greenftbays
 Refresh his duft, who loved your learned lays.
 Bring here the florid glories of the Spring,
 And, as you ftrew them, pious anthems fing;
 Which to your children and the years to come
 May fpeak of Daphnis, and be never dumb.
 While prostrate I drop on his quiet urn
 My tears, not gifts; and like the poor, that mourn

With green but humble turfs, write o'er his hearſe
For falſe foul profe-men this fair truth in verſe.

“ Here Daphnis ſleeps ; and while the great watch goes
“ Of loud and reſtleſs time takes his repoſe.
“ Fame is but noiſe ; all learning is but thought ;
“ Which one admires, another ſets at nought.
“ Nature mocks both ; and wit ſtill keeps adoe :
“ But death brings knowledge and aſſurance too.”

Menalcas.

Caſt in your garlands ! ſtrew on all the flowers,
Which May with ſmiles or April feeds with ſhowers :
Let this day's rites as ſteadfaſt as the Sun
Keep pace with time and through all ages run ;
The public character and famous teſt
Of our long ſorrows and his laſting reſt.
And when we make proceſſion on the plains,
Or yearly keep the holyday of Swains,
Let Daphnis ſtill be the recorded name,
And ſolemn honour of our feaſts and fame.
For though the Ifis and the prouder Thames
Can ſhew his relics lodged hard by their ſtreams ;
And muſt for ever to the honoured name
Of noble Murray chiefly owe that fame :
Yet here his ſtars firſt ſaw him, and when fate
Beckoned him hence, it knew no other date.
Nor will theſe vocal woods and vallies fail,
Nor Ifca's louder ſtreams, this to bewail ;
But while Swains hope, and ſeaſons change, will glide
With moving murmurs becauſe Daphnis dyed.

Damon.

A fatal ſadneſs, ſuch as ſtill foregoes,
Then runs along with public plagues and woes,

Lies heavy on us ; and the very light
 Turned mourner too hath the dull looks of night.
 Our vales, like those of death, a darkness shew
 More sad than Cypress or the gloomy Yew.
 And on our hills, where health with height complied,
 Thick drowsy mists hang round, and there reside.
 Not one short parcel of the tedious year
 In its own dress and beauty doth appear.
 Flowers hate the Spring ; and with a fullen bend
 Thrust down their heads and to the root still tend.
 And though the Sun, like a cold lover, peeps
 A little at them, still the day's eye sleeps.
 But when the Crab and Lion with acute
 And active fires their sluggish heat recruit,
 Our grass straight ruffets, and each scorching day
 Drinks up our brooks as fast as dew in May ;
 Till the sad herdsman with his Cattel faints,
 And empty channels ring with loud complaints.

Menalcas.

Heaven's just displeasure, and our unjust ways,
 Change Nature's course ; bring plagues, dearth, and decays.
 This turns our land to dust, the skies to bras,
 Makes old kind blessings into curses pass :
 And when we learn unknown and forraign crimes
 Brings in the vengeance due unto those climes.
 The dregs and puddle of all ages now,
 Like Rivers near their fall, on us do flow
 Ah, happy Daphnis ! who while yet the streams
 Ran clear and warm, though but with setting beams,
 Got through, and saw by that declining light
 His toil's and journey's end before the night.

Damon.

A night, where darknefs lays her chains and bars,
And feral fires appear inftead of ftars.
But he along with the laft looks of day
Went hence, and fetting Sunlike paffed away.
What future ftorms our prefent fins do hatch
Some in the dark difcern, and others watch ;
Though foresight makes no hurricane prove mild,
Fury that's long fermenting is moft wild.

But fee, while thus our sorrows we difcoursẽ,
Phœbus hath finifhed his diurnal courfe ;
The fhades prevail : Each bufh feems bigger grown ;
Darknefs, like ftate, makes fmall things fwell and frown :
The hills and woods with pipes and fonnets round,
And bleating fheep our Swains drive home, refound.

Menalcas.

What voice from yonder lawn tends hither ? Hark !
'Tis Thyrfis calls ! I hear Lycanthe bark !
His flocks left out fo late, and weary grown,
Are to the thickets gone, and there laid down.

Damon.

Menalcas, hafte to look them out ! Poor fheep
When day is done go willingly to fleep :
And could bad man his time fpend as they do,
He might go fleep, or die as willing too.

Menalcas.

Farewell ! kind Damon ! now the fhepherd's ftar
With beauteous looks fmiles on us though from far.
All creatures that were favorites of day
Are with the Sun retired and gone away.
While feral birds fend forth unpleafant notes,

And night, the nurse of thought, sad thoughts promotes:
But joy will yet come with the morning light,
Though sadly now we bid good night !

Damon.

Good night !
